

THE EVENING NEWS REVIEW.

16TH YEAR. NO. 175.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., FRIDAY, JANUARY 4, 1901.

TWO CENTS

WILL IT BE A THIRD BRIDGE

Parties Who Should Be Posted As sert That This Will Be an Accomplished Fact

ERE MANY MOONS PASS BY

And That a Street Car Line Will
Skirt the River on the West
Virginia Side

AND CROSS OVER AT WELLSVILLE

There seems to be an epidemic of bridge building on tip at this special
point at this special time. Perhaps
the proviso should be embraced by using the expression "an epidemic of contemplated bridge building."

And now we have the statement that
two new bridges are in sight, in the minds' eye of the projectors, prominent capitalists and well known business men of this section.

One bridge, it is said will cross over to Chester at a point somewhere in the East End, while another will span the Ohio at Wellsville, and one of the two bridges at East Liverpool will be made use of for the crossing of a street car line which will pass on down the Ohio river on the West Virginia side and come back in the Buckeye state again at Wellsville.

Our informant asserts that these are not merely visionary schemes, but actually projected ventures, sure to materialize at no distant date, and sure to be remunerative investments.

Our informant further states that heavy transactions in real estate have lately occurred here, the purchasers
securing the valuable property spoken
of under the idea of heavy advancement in values in consequence of the projected improvements.

The News Review give these statements for what they are worth. If the reports are given out by certain individuals for the purpose of aiding
themselves in certain pecuniary transactions, the News Review is innocent
in the little game of bluff as this paper does not receive a single penny
from any man or body of men for giving publicity to the reports through these columns. On the contrary, if indisputable proof can be furnished us
that our informants are working their nice little scheme at our expense, we
will take especial pleasure in unmask-
ing the schemes and posting the public as to the real condition of affairs.
But the bridge story of yesterday had
the earmarks of mean business, as papers of incorporation have been taken out, and the standing of the men who are behind the project should
be proof that they mean to erect the bridge contemplated. Further, this paper had the sacred word of honor
of a man who should be fully posted
that the projected affair means business from base.

One thing stands out in bold relief
all the way through this season of rumors, and that is that East Liverpool is destined to come to its front
with rapid strides during the next four years. Get your thinking cap on, and open your eyes of observation, and you will find that long-headed and astute business men and capitalists are buying up real estate on every hand
in this city, and paying good prices for the same.

AFTERNOON TRAIN

PLAYS HAVOC WITH THE STREET
RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

The Extra Passenger and Baggage Cars Are Responsible for the Delays.

Much complaint is heard on the part
of street car men because of the delay caused by the afternoon train
due in the city at 3:50.

For the past three weeks the train
has been made up with an extra passenger and baggage car attached to the rear of the train for river traffic and the track has been blocked
several minutes each day ever since
the change went into effect.

The schedule of the street railway
was knocked out two minutes yesterday afternoon.

TWO COAL MINERS BURNED TO DEATH

Terrible Accident Which Occurred
Near Wellsville at an Early Hour This Morning.

JOHN YATES AND HIS SON

Were Asleep in a Cabin and Only
Their Charred Remains
Were Found.

ONE 25-POUND CAN OF POWDER

John Yates, aged 45 years, and his son, George Yates, aged 18, were burned to death this morning at 4 o'clock
at a point on McQueen's Run about
two miles from Wellsville.

The men came from Yellow Creek
two or three days ago and were engaged by Alex Risher to work in his coal bank on the McGaw farm. They took up their residence in the cabin
on McQueen's run. This morning
when the blaze was discovered it was
not known whether they had escaped,
but a search of the ruins this morning
revealed their charred remains.

How the fire started is a mystery,
but there was a hole in the front of
the stove, and it is thought a live coal
probably fell through and caused the conflagration.

A 25-pound keg of powder had been placed in the cabin yesterday, but it thought the men were dead before it exploded.

Yates leaves a wife and three daughters at Hanlon station, Pa. The couple separated about 10 months ago.

TO ENLIST.

Frank Applegate Went to Pittsburg
And Will Enter the Navy.

Frank Applegate, the 18-year-old son
of Benton Applegate, of Jackson street,
left yesterday afternoon for Pittsburg,
where he today enlisted in the United States navy.

Young Applegate has had a desire
for this sort of a career for several years and lately determined to try his luck.

He will be transferred to a training vessel at Brooklyn within the next few days.

Have Whooping Cough.

Two small children in the family of

GAS EXPLODED AT ZADOC FOWLER'S

Avondale Street House Was Badly
Wrecked at an Early Hour
Last Evening.

THREE DISTINCT EXPLOSIONS

One Side of the Kitchen Was Blown Out but Luckily
Mrs. Fowler

ESCAPED ANY SERIOUS INJURY

A gas explosion occurred at the residence of Zadoc P. Fowler, 162 Minerva
street, at 5:15 o'clock last evening
that came near resulting in the death
of Mrs. Fowler.

The explosion occurred in a basement kitchen which was used by the family for cooking purposes, and
where the gas came from is as much
a mystery as in the case of the explosion which demolished the residence of Thomas Mays, Calcutta road,

some months ago, since the family
did not use gas in any part of the house.

Mr. Fowler had gone to the basement for the purpose of making preparations for supper and had arranged
the fire for kindling, but when the match was lighted the explosion, or
more properly speaking, explosions,
for there were three, in rapid succession occurred.

Mrs. Fowler was badly burned about
the face and hands, and it will be some time before she is able to be about.

The plaster was knocked from almost every room in the house and
the side of the kitchen fronting on Avondale street was blown out.

Mr. Fowler had not yet returned
from work, and some of the neighbors
summoned the fire department, who,
in addition to making a remarkably
quick run, rendered valuable assistance toward cleaning away the debris.

Mr. Fowler has not yet fixed the probable extent of his loss, but it will be considerable.

Found Dead in Bed.

Jonathan Hassen, of this city, was found dead in his bed at the Massillon street hospital this morning. He was aged about 70 years. The remains will be brought here for interment.

PLEASANT SOCIAL.

And These Young Folks Had an Exceedingly Pleasant
Time.

There was a very pleasant time last night at the home residence of Mrs.
Foutts, Fifth street, given in honor of a young lady friend and visitor of the hostess. Innocent games and pastimes held sway, and those who participated in the enjoyment report an occasion of unalloyed delight. Miss Foutts and Miss Sterling, as a part of
the evening's entertainment, entertained "the class in art."

A LOCAL CONCERN WANTS TO QUIT

John Carlson and Alfred Peterson Can't Agree on Division of the Stock.

THEY WANT THE COURT

To Enter a Decree Dissolving the Partnership and Appoint a Receiver.

THE NEWS OF THE COUNTY SEAT

Lisbon, Jan. 4.—(Special.)—John
Carlson and Alfred Peterson are parties to an action filed in court from East Liverpool. The parties formed
a partnership last August for the purpose of dealing in boots and shoes and engraving copper plates for use in the potteries. About $2,500 was invested in stock and now it is evident that the business is unprofitable and is in immediate danger of insolvency. Neither party wants to continue longer in business, but cannot agree on a division of the stock.

They want the court to enter a decree dissolving the partnership and appoint a receiver to take charge of the stock.

Helen W. Blocksom, of this city, has entered suit in common pleas court
asking that she be given a divorce
from William A. Blocksom and also the custody of her minor son. They were married in New Cumberland on June 10, 1894. Wilful absence is alleged as grounds for action.

The will in the estate of the late
Amanda McKee, of Salem, was probat-
ed today and Mary Cotten was appointed executor without bond.

E. G. McGaffick was appointed guardian of Zida Pearl Biery, of Knox township, in the place of H. C. Borton, who is dead. He gave bond in the sum of $1,600.

John Wooster, administrator of the estate of the late Catherine Trythall,
of Wellsville, will sell a tract of land
fronting on the C. & P. railroad track
at Wellsville.

On February 9, Charles M. Shaffer,
guardian of Benj. H. Adams, of Elkton,
will appear in court and show cause
why he should not be removed from
the guardianship.

—Miss Bessie Cartwright returned
to her home in Elwood City, Pa., today after a visit with Miss Verna Day
of Third street.

KEY BOXES WILL BE PROVIDED

If You Want to Sent In a Fire
Alarm You Won't

TO HUNT FOR A KEY

And Let the House Burn Down
While You Are Calling the Department.

AN UNUSUALLY GOOD MOVE

Several members of the fire department, under the direction of Chief Morley, are just now engaged in placing key boxes at the principal fire
alarm boxes in the city.

For some time past a great deal
of difficulty has been experienced in finding keys on the occasion of a
fire, as it has been customary to leave
the keys in business places at a point
near the boxes.

Under the new system it will be no
trouble whatever for a total stranger
to locate the keys and turn in an alarm.

Besides a saving of time the plan
is a great convenience.

GAS EXPLODED AT ZADOC FOWLER'S

Avondale Street House Was Badly
Wrecked at an Early Hour
Last Evening.

One Side of the Kitchen Was

Mrs. Fowler

ESCAPED ANY SERIOUS INJURY

A gas explosion occurred at the residence of Zadoc P. Fowler, 162 Minerva
street, at 5:15 o'clock last evening
that came near resulting in the death
of Mrs. Fowler.

The explosion occurred in a basement kitchen which was used by the
family for cooking purposes, and
where the gas came from is as much
a mystery as in the case of the explosion which demolished the residence of Thomas Mays, Calcutta road,

some months ago, since the family
did not use gas in any part of the house.

Mr. Fowler had gone to the basement for the purpose of making preparations for supper and had arranged
the fire for kindling, but when the
match was lighted the explosion, or
more properly speaking, explosions,
for there were three, in rapid suc-
cession occurred.

Mrs. Fowler was badly burned about
the face and hands, and it will be
some time before she is able to be
about.

The plaster was knocked from almost every room in the house and
the side of the kitchen fronting on Avondale street was blown out.

Mr. Fowler had not yet returned
from work, and some of the neighbors
summoned the fire department, who,
in addition to making a remarkably
quick run, rendered valuable assistance toward cleaning away the debris.

Mr. Fowler has not yet fixed the probable extent of his loss, but it will
be considerable.

John Carlson and Alfred Peterson
Can't Agree on Division of

THEY WANT THE COURT

To Enter a Decree Dissolving the Partnership and Appoint a Receiver.

Lisbon, Jan. 4.—(Special.)—John
Carlson and Alfred Peterson are parties to an action filed in court from East Liverpool. The parties formed
a partnership last August for the purpose of dealing in boots and shoes and
engraving copper plates for use in the potteries. About $2,500 was invested
in stock and now it is evident that the
business is unprofitable and is in immediate danger of insolvency. Neither
party wants to continue longer in
business, but cannot agree on a division of the stock.

They want the court to enter a decree dissolving the partnership and
appoint a receiver to take charge of the stock.

AN UNUSUALLY GOOD MOVE

Several members of the fire department, under the direction of Chief Morley, are just now engaged in placing key boxes at the principal fire
alarm boxes in the city.

For some time past a great deal
of difficulty has been experienced in
finding keys on the occasion of a
fire, as it has been customary to leave
the keys in business places at a point
near the boxes.

Under the new system it will be no trouble whatever for a total stranger to locate the keys and turn in an alarm.

Besides a saving of time the plan
is a great convenience.

CHAPTER III.

"Hold on, Jim. Don't make a fool of yourself. Who put up the stuff to buy the boys in the factory? Who fixed the section gang? Who's worked night and day, tooth and nail, to get this election fixed so that we can't lose?"

"That's all very well for a bluff," replied the other, "but it don't go for an answer in my question. Have you voted today?"

"Keep a civil tongue in your head," said Joe, surlily. "I answer fool questions for no man, and you know it."

"Then it's true," cried the enraged man. "Do you hear that boys! Sold out his vote to a Soda-water Bottle; he's tied to the apron strings of his precious —"

With a cry like that of an infuriated animal, Joe Travers sprang over the bar and seized his taunter by the throat. In the midst of the confused uproar he reached the entrance with his helpless prisoner, and pushing the doors wide open with a kick he flung the man out into the street as though he were a feather. As he did so the sudden fury of the crowd culminated, and a shot rang out. A puff of smoke passed before his eyes, and in the instant's daze of his sight a woman fell heavily at his feet in the doorway. Bending down through the faint mist of the blur, he looked into her face. Lying there, a tiny stream of blood trickling out of the bosom of her gown, the rain falling on her still, white features, lay—his mother.

The crowd scattered like chaff before the wind.

"Bring her in here," said the voice of the kindly German woman next door, the first words of reason that any one thought to utter.

While messengers fled with all haste for physicians and surgeons, those who crowded into that little room never forgot the sight, nor was there one who was not melted by the utter prostration of Joe Travers.

As she lay like marble, majestic in her white silence, a low murmur greeted the arrival of one who cried in suppressed tones of excitement: "Where is she?" and then Joe Travers, raising his wild eyes, saw standing by him his father.

"Father! father!" he cried. Oh, look at her! Oh, this is my work! No, don't look at me like that. I didn't do it. I don't know who did; but I'm to blame. Oh, can you forgive me? Can you forgive me?"

The face of the elder Travers was filled with an incredulous anguish as he looked at his wife, but as his eyes rested on his son, shaking in that palsy of repentance. He said brokenly: "I forgive you, but God only knows how I can bear this. I cannot give her up."

The two men threw themselves sobbing into each other's arms and as they passionately uttered words of endearment to that voiceless figure, her eyes opened, looked surprisedly into the faces bent above her, and then, half inarticulately, came the words: "What—is—it? Joe—father—I—glad to—see you."

What followed within the next moment or two was indescribably pathetic. She did not seem to realize that anything had happened to her; she only knew that these two, long estranged, and so dear to her, were there together. She smiled and placed their hands together, saying only, "How nice of you to come home, Joe."

"Will it take an eternity for any one to get there?" cried the husband. At this instant an authoritative figure pushed his way through the crowd and said brusquely: "This room must be cleared at once. All of you will leave except those whom I say stay."

Silently waiting, in what tense feeling may not be told in words, Joe Travers and his father sat together in the little kitchen. Presently the door opened and the doctor came out. "She will live," he said; "it is not even dangerous. The ball passed out through her shoulder. It is only a flesh wound. She wishes to see you."

Half staggering in his reaction from agony to joy, Joe followed his father into the room. There he broke down once more, and, throwing himself on his knees by her, burst into tears.

"Never mind, my boy," said the mother, "I'm not hurt at all. The doctor says it's not much more than what a man shot in battle would call a scratch, and I was shot in battle; so, I'll call it a scratch, too. It's all right, just so you and father have made up, and you'll come home, won't you?"

Joe Travers sprang to his feet with another of those swift changes characteristic of him. "Come home! mother! Yes, I'll come home tonight, and I'll do more—I'll close my saloon forever. I'll do anything in the world if you will forgive me for all I have done."

"I forgive you, my boy—of course I forgive you. Don't you know, I have always loved you. Joe! Joe!—it seems too good to be true! I never was so happy in my life. Kiss me, my boy."

"Be careful, Diana," said Mr. Travers. "You must not excite yourself. Everything is all right now and you must rest. Perhaps you are elected," he suggested, smiling.

"Perhaps I am elected," replied Mrs. Travers, "or perhaps"—she paused and turned her eyes on Joe. Who was elected? Who, indeed?

His father drew out his watch and looked at it.

"It is half-past five," he said. "One of you has been elected mayor of Belle Centre."

Then Joe Travers spoke:

"Mother, I had not voted yet awhile ago when—that happened, but I'm going to now. I'm going down to the polls to vote for you, and I only wish that my vote alone could elect you. It won't, but I'll do the best I can. If you're elected I'll work with you, and if I'm elected"—he paused—"I'll close the Blue Tiger forever and atone for this night's work if I can."

Silently, gazing at him with eyes that were filled with a dazzling joy, she reached up her arms and drew his head down to her face, breathing only: "O God! I thank thee for this hour—"

He raised himself, and stopping only to say, "I'll be back soon," he rushed out of the house. Running swiftly toward the square, he saw as he passed the open road leading southward out of town a dark moving line approaching the village. Full well he knew what the dark line was—it was the men of the section gang, laborers on the railroad, who were compelled to go to their work before the polls opened, and now they had knocked off work half an hour earlier than usual and were on their way to cast a solid vote for him. Had he not "fixed" them?

As he ran a powerful voice in the moving line advancing through the rain sung out the first line of "John Brown's Body." The refrain was instantly caught up by the steadily tramping men, forty odd, and thus they approached each other, the hat-

less, flying man in the dark, marching line, marked by the rhythm of the song: "Glory, glory, hallelujah! As we go marching on!"

"Stop!" he shouted; "stop a minute, boys! I've got something to say to you."

"Why, Joe," said the leader, stepping forward, "what's the matter?" For an answer he leaped onto a pile of ties and cried out:

"Listen to me. Less than an hour ago my mother was shot on the steps of my saloon while I was throwing out a coward who would have insulted her. She's not much hurt, but it might have killed her, and that's enough for me. Boys, you know me. I'm done now. I've quit—the business forever, and I want you to help me. I hadn't voted yet, but now I'm going to vote for my mother. I don't want your votes—they're no good to me now. What I want to ask you is this: Will any of you go to the polls with me and vote for my mother?"

From out of the astonished silence of the crowd there arose a hoarse, indeterminate murmur. Then out stepped a man from the rest.

"Your mother's a lady and a Christian, Joe, and I'll vote for her for one. I'm with you, Joe."

"And so am I!" "And so am I!" "Turncoat!" shouted an angry voice.

"Turncoat or no turncoat," cried Joe Travers, fiercely, "I'll stand up for my mother. Is there any one of you so lost to decency that he can see a woman, and that woman his own mother, shot down in cold blood and not resent it! Answer me, have any of the rest of you got mothers?"

He who had cried "turncoat" slunk away, grumbling, and was followed by two or three growling profanely in their throats of "treachery" and "babyism."

"Go ahead, Joe, we're ready," sung out the foreman.

"Then come on, quick; there's no time to lose. Start that song again and let 'em know we're coming."

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave—"

They tramped in a double-quick step up the track—

"As we go marching on—"

They reached the crossing and turned out to the road—"Glory, glory, hallelujah—"

They gained the edge of the town, and were recruited by dozens—

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave—"

Surrounded by the cheering populace, they swept on to the square. In front, Joe Travers, hatless, striding determinedly—

"As we go marching on—"

They drew up at the polling place. As Joe Travers walked into the polling booth of the "drys" a mighty shout went up, and, amid wild cheering, the forty odd votes were quickly deposited. As the last man turned away, the clock struck 6 and the polls closed.

Three hours later Mrs. Travers, resting comfortably, lay on a lounge in her own home, surrounded by her family and friends, including all of her associates on the ticket of the "drys."

Up the street floated the sound of martial strains and the tramping of many feet. Nearer it came, and nearer —paused in front of the lawn—and there was loud shouting: "Three cheers for the mayor!"

"It's you, mother; I know it is," said Joe.

Pale and weak, she gathered herself up, and cried in resonant tones: "I thank you, my friends. God bless you all. You must excuse me now."

She turned toward Joe. Another impulse struck the jubilant crowd.

"What's the matter with Joe Travers?"

And the torches flickered with the vibrations of the stentorian reply: "He's—all—right."

As the procession, still cheering on general principles, passed the Blue Tiger, the torches showed distinctly a sign reading: "Closed—Joe Travers." Whereat they cheered again.

As to the mysterious shot, every one knew now that the responsibility could not be definitely fixed, but as three of the toughest characters of the village had secretly boarded the train three miles south of town with the information that they were "skipping the blasted town for good," it was generally understood that if they stayed skipped, the matter would be dropped.

It was one week later that Joe Travers stood on the platform of the largest church in Belle Centre. The mayor sat with the pastors of the churches on the great platform, surrounded by the city council, the clerk and some distinguished invited guests from adjoining towns who were on hand to see "how it worked."

He had just finished his speech. "It was the happiest moment of my life when I cast that vote for my mother, and it is to her, and to the good women of this village, that I owe it all. I thank God for my mother's prayers, for her tears, for her undying determination. And further, good people, I ask all of you to forgive me for the evil I have caused to this town. My father and mother have forgiven me, and I trust that Christ also has pardoned me, for by his help the rest of my life shall be devoted to his service. I have offered all that I have and am to the Lord, and if you will let me help you as well as I can, I will gladly be the humblest worker of you all in the making of our little city a model for others. Not for my sake, but for the sake of these—" he pointed to the women—"I ask you to think of me with as little harshness as you can, and let me show by the rest of my life that I mean what I say."

There could be but one outcome to such forces set in motion. In less than a year Belle Centre was practically another town, so far as the administration of its municipal affairs was concerned. The saloons were closed, despite the reckless threats made at first by the tough element, which did not propose to be downed by the "Mammas." Nor was Belle Centre injured by the fact that several who could not stand the changed order of things, got out, sans ceremony. The street paving and lighting were materially improved, and incidentally the manner in which public funds had been misappropriated came to light; a public park was laid out, the library enlarged and a lecture course provided. When you want to hear these things well told you should hear them—as I did—told by a well-known citizen of Belle Centre, Mr. Joseph Travers, Jr., at what was once the sign of the Blue Tiger, but now the leading restaurant and coffee house of the town.

They gained the edge of the town, and were recruited by dozens—

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave—"

Surrounded by the cheering populace, they swept on to the square. In front, Joe Travers, hatless, striding determinedly—

"As we go marching on—"

They drew up at the polling place. As Joe Travers walked into the polling booth of the "drys" a mighty shout went up, and, amid wild cheering, the forty odd votes were quickly deposited. As the last man turned away, the clock struck 6 and the polls closed.

Three hours later Mrs. Travers, resting comfortably, lay on a lounge in her own home, surrounded by her family and friends, including all of her associates on the ticket of the "drys."

Up the street floated the sound of martial strains and the tramping of many feet. Nearer it came, and nearer

—paused in front of the lawn—and there was loud shouting: "Three cheers for the mayor!"

"It's you, mother; I know it is," said Joe.

Pale and weak, she gathered herself up, and cried in resonant tones: "I thank you, my friends. God bless you all. You must excuse me now."

She turned toward Joe. Another impulse struck the jubilant crowd.

"What's the matter with Joe Travers?"

And the torches flickered with the vibrations of the stentorian reply:

"He's—all—right."

As the procession, still cheering on general principles, passed the Blue Tiger, the torches showed distinctly a sign reading: "Closed—Joe Travers." Whereat they cheered again.

As to the mysterious shot, every one knew now that the responsibility could not be definitely fixed, but as three of the toughest characters of the village had secretly boarded the train three miles south of town with the information that they were "skipping the blasted town for good," it was generally understood that if they stayed skipped, the matter would be dropped.

It was one week later that Joe Travers stood on the platform of the largest church in Belle Centre. The mayor sat with the pastors of the churches on the great platform, surrounded by the city council, the clerk and some distinguished invited guests from adjoining towns who were on hand to see "how it worked."

He had just finished his speech. "It was the happiest moment of my life when I cast that vote for my mother, and it is to her, and to the good women of this village, that I owe it all. I thank God for my mother's prayers, for her tears, for her undying determination. And further, good people, I ask all of you to forgive me for the evil I have caused to this town. My father and mother have forgiven me, and I trust that Christ also has pardoned me, for by his help the rest of my life shall be devoted to his service. I have offered all that I have and am to the Lord, and if you will let me help you as well as I can, I will gladly be the humblest worker of you all in the making of our little city a model for others. Not for my sake, but for the sake of these—" he pointed to the women—"I ask you to think of me with as little harshness as you can, and let me show by the rest of my life that I mean what I say."

There could be but one outcome to such forces set in motion. In less than a year Belle Centre was practically another town, so far as the administration of its municipal affairs was concerned. The saloons were closed, despite the reckless threats made at first by the tough element, which did not propose to be downed by the "Mamas." Nor was Belle Centre injured by the fact that several who could not stand the changed order of things, got out, sans ceremony. The street paving and lighting were materially improved and incidentally the manner in which public funds had been misappropriated came to light; a public park was laid out, the library enlarged and a lecture course provided. When you want to hear these things well told you should hear them—as I did—told by a well-known citizen of Belle Centre, Mr. Joseph Travers, Jr., at what was once the sign of the Blue Tiger, but now the leading restaurant and coffee house of the town.

AT THE SIGN OF THE BLUE TIGER.

CHAPTER III.

"Hold on, Jim. Don't make a fool of yourself. Who put up the stuff to buy the boys in the factory? Who fixed the section gang? Who's worked night and day, tooth and nail, to get this election fixed so that we can't lose?"

"Keep a civil tongue in your head," said Joe, surlily. "I answer fool questions for no man, and you know it."

"Then it's true," cried the enraged man. "Do you hear that boys! Sold out his vote to a Soda-water Bottle; he's tied to the apron strings of his precious —"

With a cry like that of an infuriated animal, Joe Travers sprang over the bar and seized his taunter by the throat. In the midst of the confused uproar he reached the entrance with his helpless prisoner, and pushing the doors wide open with a kick he flung the man out into the street as though he were a feather. As he did so the sudden fury of the crowd culminated, and a shot rang out. A puff of smoke passed before his eyes, and in the instant's daze of his sight a woman fell heavily at his feet in the doorway. Bending down through the faint mist of the blur, he looked into her face. Lying there, a tiny stream of blood trickling out of the bosom of her gown, the rain falling on her still, white features, lay—his mother.

The crowd scattered like chaff before the wind.

"Bring her in here," said the voice of the kindly German woman next door, the first words of reason that any one thought to utter.

As she lay like marble, majestic in her white silence, a low murmur greeted the arrival of one who cried in suppressed tones of excitement: "Where is she?" and then Joe Travers, raising his wild eyes, saw standing by him his father.

"Father! father!" he cried. Oh, look at her! Oh, this is my work! No, don't look at me like that. I didn't do it. I don't know who did; but I'm to blame. Oh, can you forgive me? Can you forgive me?"

The face of the elder Travers was filled with an incredulous anguish as he looked at his wife, but as his eyes rested on his son, shaking in that palsy of repentance. He said brokenly: "I forgive you, but God only knows how I can bear this. I cannot give her up."

The two men threw themselves sobbing into each other's arms and as they passionately uttered words of endearment to that voiceless figure, her eyes opened, looked surprisedly into the faces bent above her, and then, half inarticulately, came the words: "What—is—it? Joe—father—I—glad to—see you."

What followed within the next moment or two was indescribably pathetic. She did not seem to realize that anything had happened to her; she only knew that these two, long estranged, and so dear to her, were there together. She smiled and placed their hands together, saying only, "How nice of you to come home, Joe."

"Will it take an eternity for any one to get there?" cried the husband. At this instant an authoritative figure

pushed his way through the crowd and said brusquely: "This room must be cleared at once. All of you will leave except those whom I say stay."

Silently waiting, in what tense feeling may not be told in words, Joe Travers and his father sat together in the little kitchen. Presently the door opened and the doctor came out. "She will live," he said; "it is not even dangerous. The ball passed out through her shoulder. It is only a flesh wound. She wishes to see you."

Half staggering in his reaction from agony to joy, Joe followed his father into the room. There he broke down once more, and, throwing himself on his knees by her, burst into tears.

"Never mind, my boy," said the mother, "I'm not hurt at all. The doctor says it's not much more than what a man shot in battle would call a scratch, and I was shot in battle; so, I'll call it a scratch, too. It's all right, just so you and father have made up, and you'll come home, won't you?"

Joe Travers sprang to his feet with another of those swift changes characteristic of him. "Come home! mother! Yes, I'll come home tonight, and I'll do more—I'll close my saloon forever. I'll do anything in the world if you will forgive me for all I have done."

"I forgive you, my boy—of course I forgive you. Don't you know, I have always loved you. Joe! Joe!—it seems too good to be true! I never was so happy in my life. Kiss me, my boy."

"Be careful, Diana," said Mr. Travers. "You must not excite yourself. Everything is all right now and you must rest. Perhaps you are elected," he suggested, smiling.

"Perhaps I am elected," replied Mrs. Travers, "or perhaps"—she paused and turned her eyes on Joe. Who was elected? Who, indeed?

His father drew out his watch and looked at it.

"It is half-past five," he said. "One of you has been elected mayor of Belle Centre."

Then Joe Travers spoke: "Mother, I had not voted yet awhile ago when—when that happened, but I'm going to now. I'm going down to the polls to vote for you, and I only wish that my vote alone could elect you. It won't, but I'll do the best I can. If you're elected I'll work with you, and if I'm elected"—he paused—"I'll close the Blue Tiger forever and atone for this night's work if I can."

He raised himself, and stopping only to say, "I'll be back soon," he rushed out of the house. Running swiftly toward the square, he saw as he passed the open road leading southward out of town a dark moving line approaching the village. Full well he knew what the dark line was—it was the men of the section gang, laborers on the railroad, who were compelled to go to their work before the polls opened, and now they had knocked off work half an hour earlier than usual and were on their way to cast a solid vote for him. Had he not "fixed" them?

His swiftly running feet had not taken three steps more before he turned sharply at right angles southward on the open road and ran faster than before to the railroad crossing, and thence down the track.

As he ran a powerful voice in the moving line advancing through the rain sung out the first line of "John Brown's Body." The refrain was instantly caught up by the steadily tramping men, forty odd, and thus they approached each other, the hat-

less, flying man in the dark, marching line, marked by the rhythm of the song: "Glory, glory, hallelujah! As we go marching on!"

"Listen to me. Less than an hour ago my mother was shot on the steps of my saloon while I was throwing out a coward who would have insulted her. She's not much hurt, but it might have killed her, and that's enough for me. Boys, you know me. I'm done now. I've quit—quit the business forever, and I want you to help me. I hadn't voted yet, but now I'm going to vote for my mother. I don't want your votes—they're no good to me now. What I want to ask you is this: Will any of you go to the polls with me and vote for my mother?"

From out of the astonished silence of the crowd there arose a hoarse, indeterminate murmur. Then out stepped a man from the rest.

"Your mother's a lady and a Christian, Joe, and I'll vote for her for one. I'm with you, Joe."

"And so am I!"
"Turncoat!" shouted an angry voice.

"Turncoat or no turncoat," cried Joe Travers, fiercely, "I'll stand up for my mother. Is there any one of you so lost to decency that he can see a woman, and that woman his own mother, shot down in cold blood and not resent it! Answer me, have any of the rest of you got mothers?"

He who had cried "turncoat" slunk away, grumbling, and was followed by two or three growling profanely in their throats of "treachery" and "babyism."

"Go ahead, Joe, we're ready," sung out the foreman.

"Then come on, quick; there's no time to lose. Start that song again and let 'em know we're coming."

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave —"

They tramped in a double-quick step up the track—

"As we go marching on—"

They reached the crossing and turned into the road—"Glory, glory, hallelujah—"

They gained the edge of the town, and were recruited by dozens—

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave—"

PETTIGREW OBJECTED

But Senate Voted to Continue
Considering Army Bill.

SUBSIDY BILL BACK TO CALENDAR.

Military Measure Made Unfinished Business — Opposition Senators Indicated Their Line of Attack May Be Against Large, Permanent Standing Army.

Washington, Jan. 4.—When the senate convened in its first session of the twentieth century the army bill was taken up with a view to pressing it to a formal vote as soon as possible. Its consideration proceeded until about 2 o'clock in the afternoon—called the end of the morning hour—when the subsidy bill was laid before the senate. Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, then objected to a request for unanimous consent to continue the discussion of the army bill. By a vote of the senate the military measure was continued for consideration, thus making it the unfinished business and sending the subsidy bill back to the calendar.

During the discussion of the army measure the opposition senators indicated that their line of attack upon the bill would be against the creation of a large, permanent standing army. There was intimation that objection would not be offered to a temporary measure to provide an adequate force to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines. Beyond this point the proceedings developed apparently little of importance.

RADICALS WERE DEFEATED.

Resolution of Olmstead on Southern Apportionment Lost, Some Republicans Helping Democrats.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The radical element among the house Republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the southern states in which franchise is abridged suffered defeat because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. The issue was precipitated quite unexpectedly. The leaders had decreed that the reapportionment bill should be taken up, but before it could be called Mr. Olmstead, of Pennsylvania, offered as a matter of privilege, a resolution reciting the alleged abridgement of the suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and North Carolina and directing the committee on census to investigate and report the facts to the house in order that a constitutional basis of representation could be established for those states. The resolution created a sensation. It was a surprise even to several of the Republican leaders. The leaders on the Democratic side sought in vain to head off the resolution with points of order, but the speaker ruled against them. They then began to filibuster, openly avowing that they would fight every proposition looking to the reduction of representation from the southern states to the bitter end. Several of the Republicans were secretly in sympathy with them, and their indifference to the fate of the Olmstead resolution in the end gave the opposition the victory. Many of them quietly paired with absent Democrats, leaving their absent colleagues unpaired. As a result, when the question of consideration was raised against the resolution, it was defeated, 81 to 83. The vote was a strict party one. Two Republicans, Landis, of Indiana, and Mann, of Illinois, answered present, but did not vote. The story of the defeat is found in the absentees on both sides who were unpaired. Thirty-two Republicans were absent and unpaired, against 16 of the opposition. Those absent and unpaired were:

Republicans—Boutelle, Maine; Brosius, Brown, Burkett, Dick, Calderhead, Clarke, New Hampshire; Dahle, Samuel Davenport, Dick, Fowler, Gardner (N. J.), Hawley, Hofferker, Knox, Lorimer, Loudenslager, McCleary, Metcalf, Miller, Mondell, Morgan, Needham, Otjen, Parker, Prince, Russell, Showalter, Smith (Ill.), Sprague, Stevens (Minn.), Wadsworth and Wanger.

Democrats—Barber (Pa.), Bradley (N. Y.), Brewer, Caldwell, Catchings, Gaston, Gayle, Glynn, Levy, May, Meekinson, Shephard, Stallings, Wilson (S. C.) and Zeigler.

Silver Republican—Wilson (Idaho).

The situation with reference to the apportionment bill is greatly complicated as a result of the injection of the Olmstead resolution. Chairman Hopkins, however, was confident of victory for his bill. He thought the Olmstead resolution might pass in a full house and that the investigation might be made, but that the matter would end there. Irrespective of the fate of the resolution, however, he would press the reapportionment bill and thought it will pass on Monday. If possible he may displace private bill today with his measure.

HAWLEY AN ALARMIST?

Intimated That We Might Be In Danger of Trouble With Some European Power.

Washington, Jan. 4.—In a speech in the senate on the army bill, Mr. Hawley said, in part, that the necessity for an adequate army was evident to all, and further said in part: "We are not altogether out of sight of some possibility of war with some European power. We do not know. They are in a great deal of trouble there, and I understand they look with very great jealousy upon our talk of a Danish island and our talk about acquiring other territory."

BISHOP NINDE DEAD.

Aged Dignitary of the M. E. Church Found Dead in Bed—Aged 68 Years.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Bishop W. X. Ninde, aged 68 years, of the Methodist Episcopal church, was found dead in his bed at his home here. It is thought the cause of death was heart trouble. He attended a funeral the day before and caught a cold. He had been a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1884, and was known throughout the United States. Prior to his election as a bishop he was pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church here and was at one time a missionary in India. He left a wife, three sons and one daughter. One son, Edward, is a Methodist minister at Ann Arbor. His daughter Mary was formerly a missionary worker in India. She is now in the south with her brother Fred, who is ill. The other son, George, is also ill at his home here. The day before the presiding elders of Michigan held a conference here and decided to sell the Episcopal residence, now occupied by Bishop Ninde's family, because the churches of Michigan outside of Detroit and other large cities failed to contribute sufficient funds to maintain it.

CONGRESS TAKES A HAND.

Committee Started Investigation of Hazing, Said to Have Caused Booz's Death.

Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—The congressional investigation committee, recently appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the case of Oscar L. Booz, the former West Point cadet, whose relatives believe he came to his death as a result of hazing at the military academy two years ago, assembled at the Lafayette hotel in this city last night. The committee, which consists of Charles Dick, Ohio, chairman; Edmund H. Driggs, New York; Irving P. Wanger, Pennsylvania; Walter I. Smith, Iowa, and Bertram T. Clayton, New York, held an executive session, at which the preliminary arrangements for the taking of testimony was made. The committee was to leave here this morning for Bristol, the home of the Booz family, and will immediately begin the taking of testimony. After hearing the Bristol witnesses the committee was to return to this city to hear Philadelphia physicians who were connected with the case, after which the investigators will sit at West Point. Night sessions will probably be held in order to expedite the inquiry. A copy of the testimony taken by the military board of inquiry has been sent to the congressional committee for reference.

It is announced that the case of former Cadet John Breth will be taken up, and telegrams have been sent to the young man's father and the family physician at Altoona, summoning them to Philadelphia. Messages were also sent to a young man named Burnham, who, while a cadet at West Point, lived in the same tent with Booz. Burnham resides in Richmond, Ky.

Investigation Into Fire Horror.

Fredonia, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Testimony of students in the inquest into the cause of deaths in the recent state normal and training school fire showed lack of fire drills and instruction relative to the use of the fire escapes. Principal Francis Palmer stated that in his opinion had Janitor Morris, who perished, used the fire extinguisher tube he could have extinguished the blaze before it gained headway.

Superintendent at Annapolis Called Upon Regarding Charge as to a Marine's Death.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The navy department has called upon the superintendent of the naval academy for a report upon a charge submitted by Representative Rixey, of Virginia, to the effect that a marine named Hobart Green, of Virginia, had died at Annapolis from ill treatment while sick. It was alleged that Green was obliged to march while ill from pneumonia and that the ecks were washed beneath him while he lay in his hammock on the Santee.

The medical record shows that Green died of pneumonia. His father is a special pension examiner credited to Sandusky, O.

PETTIGREW OBJECTED

But Senate Voted to Continue
Considering Army Bill.

SUBSIDY BILL BACK TO CALENDAR.

Military Measure Made Unfinished Business—Opposition Senators Indicated Their Line of Attack May Be Against Large, Permanent Standing Army.

Washington, Jan. 4.—When the senate convened in its first session of the twentieth century the army bill was taken up with a view to pressing it to a formal vote as soon as possible. Its consideration proceeded until about 2 o'clock in the afternoon—called the end of the morning hour—when the subsidy bill was laid before the senate. Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, then objected to a request for unanimous consent to continue the discussion of the army bill. By a vote of the senate the military measure was continued for consideration, thus making it the unfinished business and sending the subsidy bill back to the calendar.

During the discussion of the army measure the opposition senators indicated that their line of attack upon the bill would be against the creation of a large, permanent standing army. There was intimation that objection would not be offered to a temporary measure to provide an adequate force to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines. Beyond this point the proceedings developed apparently little of importance.

RADICALS WERE DEFEATED.

Resolution of Olmsted on Southern Apportionment Lost, Some Republicans Helping Democrats.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The radical element among the house Republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the southern states in which franchise is abridged suffered defeat because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. The issue was precipitated quite unexpectedly. The leaders had decreed that the reapportionment bill should be taken up, but before it could be called Mr. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, offered as a matter of privilege, a resolution reciting the alleged abridgement of the suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and North Carolina and directing the committee on census to investigate and report the facts to the house in order that a constitutional basis of representation could be established for those states. The resolution created a sensation. It was a surprise even to several of the Republican leaders. The leaders on the Democratic side sought in vain to head off the resolution with points of order, but the speaker ruled against them. They then began to filibuster, openly avowing that they would fight every proposition looking to the reduction of representation from the southern states to the bitter end. Several of the Republicans were secretly in sympathy with them, and their indifference to the fate of the Olmsted resolution in the end gave the opposition the victory. Many of them quietly paired with absent Democrats unpaired. As a result, when the question of consideration was raised against the resolution, it was defeated, 81 to 83. The vote was a strict party one. Two Republicans, Landis, of Indiana, and Mann, of Illinois, answered present, but did not vote. The story of the defeat is found in the absences on both sides who were unpaired. Thirty-two Republicans were absent and unpaired, against 16 of the opposition. Those absent and unpaired were:

Republicans—Boutelle, Maine; Brocius, Brown, Burkett, Dick, Calderhead, Clarke, New Hampshire; Dahle, Samuel Davenport, Dick, Fowler, Gardner (N. J.), Hawley, Hoeffcker, Knox, Lorimer, Loudenslager, McCleary, Metcalf, Miller, Mondell, Morgan, Needham, Otjen, Parker, Prince, Russell, Showalter, Smith (Ill.), Sprague, Stevens (Minn.), Wadsworth and Wanger.

Democrats—Barber (Pa.), Bradley (N. Y.), Brewer, Caldwell, Catchings, Gaston, Gayle, Glynn, Levy, May, Meekinson, Shephard, Stallings, Wilson (S. C.) and Zelger.

Silver Republican—Wilson (Idaho).

The situation with reference to the apportionment bill is greatly complicated as a result of the injection of the Olmsted resolution. Chairman Hopkins, however, was confident of victory for his bill. He thought the

Olmsted resolution might pass in a full house and that the investigation might be made, but that the matter would end there. Irrespective of the fate of the resolution, however, he would press the reapportionment bill and thought it will pass on Monday. If possible he may displace private bill day today with his measure.

HAWLEY AN ALARMIST?

Intimated That We Might Be In Danger of Trouble With Some European Power.

Washington, Jan. 4.—In a speech in the senate on the army bill, Mr. Hawley said, in part, that the necessity for an adequate army was evident to all, and further said in part: "We are not altogether out of sight of some possibility of war with some European power. We do not know. They are in a great deal of trouble there, and I understand they look with very great jealousy upon our talk of a Danish island and our talk about acquiring other territory."

BISHOP NINDE DEAD.

Aged Dignitary of the M. E. Church Found Dead in Bed—Aged 68 Years.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Bishop W. X. Ninde, aged 68 years, of the Methodist Episcopal church, was found dead in his bed at his home here. It is thought the cause of death was heart trouble. He attended a funeral the day before and caught a cold. He had been a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1884, and was known throughout the United States. Prior to his election as a bishop he was pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church here and was at one time a missionary in India.

He left a wife, three sons and one daughter. One son, Edward, is a Methodist minister at Ann Arbor. His daughter Mary was formerly a missionary worker in India. She is now in the south with her brother Fred, who is ill. The other son, George, is also ill at his home here. The day before the presiding elders of Michigan held a conference here and decided to sell the Episcopal residence, now occupied by Bishop Ninde's family, because the churches of Michigan outside of Detroit and other large cities failed to contribute sufficient funds to maintain it.

CONGRESS TAKES A HAND.

Committee Started Investigation of Hazing, Said to Have Caused Booz's Death.

Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—The congressional investigation committee, recently appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the case of Oscar L. Booz, the former West Point cadet, whose relatives believe he came to his death as a result of hazing at the military academy two years ago, assembled at the Lafayette hotel in this city last night. The committee, which consists of Charles Dick, Ohio, chairman; Edmund H. Driggs, New York; Irving P. Smith, Iowa; and Bertram T. Clayton, New York, held an executive session, at which the preliminary arrangements for the taking of testimony was made. The committee was to leave here this morning for Bristol, the home of the Booz family, and will immediately begin the taking of testimony. After hearing the Bristol witnesses the committee was to return to this city to hear Philadelphia physicians who were connected with the case, after which the investigators will sit at West Point. Night sessions will probably be held in order to expedite the inquiry. A copy of the testimony taken by the military board of inquiry has been sent to the congressional committee for reference. It is announced that the case of former Cadet John Breth will be taken up, and telegrams have been sent to the young man's father and the family physician at Altoona, summoning them to Philadelphia. Messages were also sent to a young man named Burnham, who, while a cadet at West Point, lived in the same tent with Booz. Burnham resides in Richmond, Ky.

Investigation Into Fire Horror.

Fredonia, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Testimony of students in the inquest into the cause of deaths in the recent state normal and training school fire showed lack of fire drills and instruction relative to the use of the fire escapes. Principal Francis Palmer stated that in his opinion had Janitor Morris, who perished, used the fire extinguisher tube he could have extinguished the blaze before it gained headway.

$100,000 MEN.

A daily journal in this neck of woods solemnly announces that Uncle Sam will enlist $100,000 men for the Philippine service. "That's a dandy nice bounty," said a genial and handsome salesman in one of our clothing establishments, "and I guess I'll hunt up a recruiting officer. One hundred thousand dollars in bright yellow gold will repay me well for three years' duty in the Philippines."

DENS OF VICE.

Reform, in genuine earnest, is the order of the day and night in Chicago and New York city. The citizen's committee mean Reform with a big "R," thank God, and the gamblers and thugs, and illegal liquor sellers, and keepers of dives and brothels have just cause for uneasiness and alarm, as their protectors and patron saints and guardians, the policemen, sworn to enforce the laws and ordinances, and breaking their solemn oath as if perjury were a pleasant pastime, are no longer able to protect them from the righteous vengeance of an outraged public, composed of clean and decent citizens. God grant that this much needed reform may sweep all over the cities mentioned, and all over the nation, and that the process may catch some unhung and unpunished rascals in this city of East Liverpool.

PULL THEIR FANGS.

When you catch a snake, slimy, slippery, forbidding, forked and crooked of tongue, a foul and poisonous thing, at a disadvantage, don't hesitate a moment, but pull its fangs, for fear that it may, at some future time, try to sting some of your friends. Respectfully referred to the fellows who have been bleeding the politicians of Columbiana county, under the pretense of possessing a strong political following, when the identical boasters could not be elected to the berth of sexton of a country graveyard or the janitor of a village calaboose. These same snaky customers have been fed for years by a generous hand, and the slimy creatures show their gratitude by striking at the hand which fed them. You can name these serpents, as their actions have discovered their hiding places and the modus operandi of their work. Beware of them. In their dying moments they may spit forth venom. Pull their fangs.

THE PUBLIC DANCE.

And some mothers in this city, backed by some fathers, one and all of them no doubt loving their daughters, can find no special harm in, and will even make excuses for the public dance. God pity and have mercy upon all such fond and foolish parents and heads of families. Let the writer illustrate the awful danger. Not long since there was a dance at a public resort in this city. There was present a charming young lady resident, a member of one of our respectable families. She had been indulging in a waltz with a respectable young man, and was accosted a moment later by a saloon keeper, the proprietor of one of the most notorious and vilest dens in this city, who requested the favor of her company in the dance, and she, fearful of offending some of his friends by a refusal, was a moment later encircled in the fellow's arms and gliding over the waxed floor. The association was simply an infamy against any pure and good and virtuous girl, and her father and mother should have dreaded the contact with such a creature, on the part of their much loved daughter, as they would that of a leper, a viper or a ravenous wild beast, thirsting for human gore. In the name of everything sacred, fathers and mothers of East Liverpool, keep your pure and virtuous daughters away from the public dances, as such resorts are side partners and go hand in glove with the saloon and the brothel. This is plain talk; but it is the unvarnished truth, and the sooner you face the fact, the better it will be for yourself and your household.

UNION FROM PRINCIPLE.

The News Review office is a strictly union office, all the way through, from front to rear, from top to bottom, from center to circumference. This paper is a union paper on the standpoint of principle, believing that true unionists are the best men that an employer can employ. What we mean by true unionists is that class of men who always give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. A loafer and a bum and a drunkard and a gambler and a debauchee and a dishonest man cannot, in the nature of things, be a true unionist. The owner and manager of this paper has always been a true unionist, from the standpoint of principle. He has never been a rat, under any circumstances, from the time he first joined Typographical union No. 7, of Pittsburg, Pa., when he first went to work on the Pittsburg Evening Chronicle, Fifth avenue, after serving for four years in the ranks in the great war of the Rebellion, and he never will become a rat, under any circumstances. Can his petty, unscrupulous and dirty enemies say the same? Conscious of the truth of our assertions, we fling defiance in the face of our sneaking, cowardly, contemptible and underhand enemies. This office is a union office all the way through, despite the assertion of a man who calls himself a pressman to the contrary, he having been so foolish and verdant as to place himself on record as making untrue and false accusations against this office and its union manager and union employees, and we have solid proof of the uttering and mouthings of his lying tongue. We have uncovered and exposed ward bummers and so-called political heelers, and taken away from them their income, gained from worse than highway robbery, and they have taken this lying, underhanded and cowardly way of getting even. Let them have a care. Forbearance may cease to be a virtue in their cases, and we may be compelled to give the names of the ungrateful scoundrels. This is but the opening of the warfare. We bide our time. In the meantime, tell the coward who asserts that the News Review is an unfair or non-union office, that Manager Palmer brands him as a plain, common, every day liar, and that Manager Palmer can furnish full proof that such is the case.

COUNCILMEN ACCUSED.

More Arrests on Bribery Charges, at Scranton, Pa.—Others May Be Rearrested.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three more arrests of councilmen were made at the instance of the Municipal league on charges of bribery. Select Councilmen Thomas O'Boyle, of the Eighteenth ward; John J. McAndrew, of the Twenty-first ward, and Edward J. Coleman, of the Sixteenth ward. At a hearing Thursday they were examined generally on their participation in the passage of the Lackawanna telephone ordinance and the electric light ordinance. A number of the witnesses were councilmen who had been previously arrested, but who escaped prosecution by the compromise agreement.

At that time two of them, Messrs. Williams and McCann, agreed to tell the whole truth concerning city hall, but at a hearing Wednesday they answered every question in the negative. They will be rearrested, so it was asserted, on the charge which they escaped, and will also be prosecuted for perjury. One of the stories to be brought out is concerning a councilman combine, by which the members were to receive $75 per month during their term for influencing legislation.

W. H. MONTGOMERY LOST HIS PLACE

The Wellsville Record Print an Interesting Story In Regard
to Telephone Affairs.

LESTER LAUGHLIN'S PHONE

Was Ordered Taken Out by Attorney Walton, but Order
Was Not Obeyed.

THIS IS WHAT CAUSED TROUBLE

A story in regard to the retirement
of W. H. Montgomery from the employ of the Columbiana County Telephone company was printed last evening in the Wellsville Record. It is exceedingly interesting and is as follows:

The stand which W. H. Montgomery
took in reference to the telephone in
the disorderly house of Lester Laugh-
lin in this city was one of the things which cost him his job with the Independent Telephone company.

Mr. Montgomery was the superintendent of the company at East Liverpool. When the public discovered that Laughlin had a telephone in his house
there was a howl. In Cleveland there is an ordinance which prohibits disorderly houses from having a telephone.

Attorney Walton, of the telephone company, happened to visit this city when the Laughlin telephone matter was up, and he gave an order in writing for the removal of the telephone from Laughlin's house. He gave the order to Harry Kelly, the company's electrician. Laughlin appealed to Montgomery, who ordered that the telephone be left in the house. Kelly refused to take it out, claiming that he recognized Montgomery as his superior
officer.

About a week ago the company discharged both Montgomery and Kelly.
Mr. Kelly, however, has been reinstated and is now at work for the company. Montgomery's successor is
B. Coplin, of Findlay.

It is said the company would have discharged Kelly long ago but had to wait until they could get a competent man to fill his place. The Laughlin telephone matter, it is said, was one of the things the company laid
up against him.

It will be news to the public that there is no telephone in Laughlin's
house now. It was taken out about a week ago. Laughlin surrendered the telephone on his own motion, though
an official of the company states that
the telephone would have been taken out if Laughlin did not surrender it.

The Independent company now has
a new general manager in this county.
He is W. H. Crosley, and his headquarters are at Salem. William Hay, formerly of Youngstown, has been appointed electrician of the company
with headquarters at East Liverpool.

The entertainment was in the shape
of a Mother Goose rhyme guessing contest, and was as enjoyable as it was novel.

Miss Bessie Hanley and Wm. Hustin were found to be a tie for the lady prize, and lots being cast the sole honor or dishonor fell to Mr.
Huston.

The first prize was won by Miss Owler and Dick Chambers, but owing to the fact that the Mother Goose
rhymes had not yet been issued when was a boy, and especially because made such an able effort as a composer of other verses, the prize was linquished to Prof. Laughlin.

Refreshments were served and the action will go down in the history
of the society as one of the most pleasant since its organization.

Two Young Girls' Complaint of Treatment Received at the Hands
of Their Parents.

There is trouble in the Robinson
family on Dixon's hill.

Complaint has been made by two daughters that they are receiving very bad treatment at the hands of their parents, and it is likely steps will be taken to find homes for them elsewhere.

A few days ago 16-year-old Mary Robinson was found sitting on the steps of a Mulberry street residence,
and upon being questioned by the people residing therein, stated she was afraid to go home. She was half clad and presented a pitiable spectacle.

TOO MUCH WATER.

Bursted Water Pipe Caused Some Trouble at an East End
Residence.

A bursted water pipe in the house
of Joseph Mills, occupied by Mrs.
House, St. George street, caused a great deal of trouble this morning.
The pipe had frozen and was bursted
in an attempt to thaw it. Captain perence turned off the water, but not
tent man to fill his place. The Laugh-
lin telephone matter, it is said, was
one of the things the company laid
up against him.

Returned to Mansfield.

Mrs. H. E. Hall, who has been visiting her parents in East End, has returned to her home in Mansfield. She expects to spend a few days in Se-
bring.

Funeral Services.

The funeral of the three-months-
old child of Mr. and Mrs. William Telme will take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home of Mrs. Hamilton, East End.

A Candidate.

L. W. Carman will be a candidate for re-election to the position of justice of the peace at the coming spring election.

East End Notes.

HE WAS FINED.

John Durff Was Assessed $20 And Costs for Running a Slot
Machine.

John Durff was arraigned yesterday
in the court of Justice Johnson on a charge of running a slot machine.

Durff pleaded guilty and a fine of $20 and costs was imposed. The fine
and costs amounted to something over

The statement that the charge was made by Retiring Constable Allison
was incorrect, as Justice Johnson
made the statement yesterday that he
was entirely responsible for the charge. He said, however, that he would be lenient on this occasion and would impose the minimum fine in such cases.

There is thought to be something
behind the whole affair that will develop within the next few days, and when it does some surprises are in store for a number of the residents
of that community.

The Hancock County Building And

W. H. MONTGOMERY LOST HIS PLACE

Interesting Story In Rega
to Telephone Affairs.

Was Ordered Taken Out by Attorney Walton, but Order
Was Not Obeyed.

THIS IS WHAT CAUSED TROUBLE

A story in regard to the retirement
of W. H. Montgomery from the employ of the Columbiana County Telephone company was printed last evening in the Wellsville Record. It is exceedingly interesting and is as follows:

The stand which W. H. Montgomery
took in reference to the telephone in the disorderly house of Lester Laughlin in this city was one of the things
which cost him his job with the Independent Telephone company.

Mr. Montgomery was the superintendent of the company at East Liverpool. When the public discovered that Laughlin had a telephone in his house
there was a howl. In Cleveland there
is an ordinance which prohibits disorderly houses from having a telephone.

Attorney Walton, of the telephone company, happened to visit this
city when the Laughlin telephone matter was up, and he gave an order in
writing for the removal of the telephone from Laughlin's house. He gave the order to Harry Kelly, the company's electrician. Laughlin appealed to Montgomery, who ordered that the telephone be left in the house. Kelly refused to take it out, claiming that he recognized Montgomery as his superior
officer.

About a week ago the company discharged both Montgomery and Kelly.
Mr. Kelly, however, has been reinstated and is now at work for the company. Montgomery's successor is
B. Coplin, of Findlay.

It is said the company would have discharged Kelly long ago but had to wait until they could get a competent man to fill his place. The Laugh-
lin telephone matter, it is said, was
one of the things the company
up against him.

It will be news to the public that
there is no telephone in Laughlin's
house now. It was taken out about a week ago. Laughlin surrendered the
telephone on his own motion, though
an official of the company states that
the telephone would have been taken
out if Laughlin did not surrender it.

The Independent company now has
a new general manager in this county.
He is W. H. Crosley, and his headquarters are at Salem. William Hayden, formerly of Youngstown, has been appointed electrician of the company
with headquarters at East Liverpool.

Trouble at an East End
Residence.

A bursted water pipe in the house
of Joseph Mills, occupied by Mrs.
House, St. George street, caused a great deal of trouble this morning.
The pipe had frozen and was bursted
up an attempt to thaw it. Captain conference turned off the water, but not
tent man to fill his place. The Laugh-
lin telephone matter, it is said, was
one of the things the company
up against him.

Returned to Mansfield.

Mrs. H. E. Hall, who has been visiting her parents in East End, has returned to her home in Mansfield. She expects to spend a few days in Se-
bring.

SOUTH SIDE.

HE WAS FINED.

Costs for Running a Slot
Machine.

John Durff was arraigned yesterday
in the court of Justice Johnson on a charge of running a slot machine.

Durff pleaded guilty and a fine of $20 and costs was imposed. The fine
and costs amounted to something over

The statement that the charge was
made by Retiring Constable Allison
was incorrect, as Justice Johnson
made the statement yesterday that he
was entirely responsible for the
charge. He said, however, that he would be lenient on this occasion and
would impose the minimum fine in
such cases.

There is thought to be something
behind the whole affair that will develop within the next few days, and
when it does some surprises are in store for a number of the residents
of that community.

The Hancock County Building And

The Irondale tin mill workers are of the opinion that the Chester mill will soon start and claim that a Mr. Garner, of the Irondale mill, has been employed for the Chester mill and will finish up at Irondale next Wednesday.

They also say that one other Irondale mill worker has been engaged to work at the Chester mill.

Attending Revival Services.

A number of Chester people went to Asbury church last night for the purpose of attending the protracted meeting being conducted at that place.

The meetings are in charge of Rev.
Echol, of New Cumberland, but who preaches at Asbury and Bethel in addition to the Cumberland church, and a very successful series of services are being held.

Southside Personals.

P. L. Allison and wife left today for
New Cumberland, where they will spend a week visiting relatives.

The condition of A. S. Allison, of near Asbury chapel, is not improved,
and fears are entertained that he may
not recover.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Jackson returned to Chester last night after a visit with friends in the county.

Citizens Were Organizing at Cape Town.

MILITARY AUTHORITIES PREPARING

Were Getting Ready to Meet Contingencies—Farmers From Carnarvon Described Boers as Traveling and Seizing Horses and Estates.

Cape Town, Jan. 4.—The military authorities were preparing for all contingencies. It was decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

Farmers coming in to Carnarvon described the Boers as traveling in parallel columns, with numerous flanking parties sweeping the country of horses, plundering loyalists and carrying off estates. It appeared that they were accompanied by strings of pack horses lightly loaded.

A message from Colesberg stated that Kritzinger's commando was crossing the Middleburg district, but was getting few if any recruits.

Here in Cape Town such business men as were unable to leave were organizing a town guard composed of the leading citizens. The commercial companies asked the mayor to call a mass meeting to urge the government to suppress disloyal newspapers and to proclaim martial law.

London, Jan. 4.—Advices from Cape Town this morning were more hopeful, owing to the active recruiting of local forces in all quarters, and a better feeling prevailed in London, based upon the prospect of Lord Roberts taking the reins at the war office.

From Sydney, N. S. W., it was reported that there was quite a rush of men there anxious to join the new contingents, about 5,000 having volunteered. The reports of Lord Kitchener's conference with Burghers also tended to remove anxiety.

According to The Daily Express, Lord Kitchener had warned the mine owners that they must not count upon military protection.

London, Jan. 4.—The censorship permitted news of peace tentatives to emanate from Pretoria, containing the following in part:

About the middle of December a number of prominent Burghers who had submitted and were living in the Pretoria district formed a peace committee. Mr. Van Rensburg, a former member of the first volksraad of the Transvaal, was elected president of the committee, which included other prominent former members of the volksraad.

The committee resolved to attempt negotiations, and accordingly, in response to a suggestion, Lord Kitchener attended a meeting of the committee Dec. 21 and addressed the meeting. His speech contained the following in part:

He proceeded to point out the folly of the continuance of guerilla warfare, since the British government would never permit the re-establishment of the Boer government.

Mr. Chamberlain's statements in parliament, Lord Kitchener contended, clearly showed that there was no wish to oppress the Burghers. On the contrary, the British proposals foreshadowed an enlightened government, in which the Burghers would have a prominent share, insuring the rights of property and the ancient laws and customs of the Burghers.

Lord Kitchener urged that it was useless to continue the present inhuman struggle, pointing out that the powers had refused Mr. Kruger's requests for intervention. The Burghers, he said, had fought a good fight, but they had been overpowered, and there was no dishonor in the leaders recognizing that fact. He reminded them that there were hosts of Boer prisoners waiting to be restored to their families.

Referring to his proclamations to the country, Lord Kitchener said that unfortunately these had not been allowed to reach the Burghers and he trusted that the committee would make known the facts to the Boers in the field, as he desired to give them every chance to surrender and wished to finish the war by the most humane means possible. He promised to give the committee notice if compelled to abandon the conciliatory for harsher measures. Going on to explain his recent proclamations, confirming the statement that those who had broken oaths of neutrality would be treated in the same way as the others, he told the committee that all would be accommodated with their families, in protected laagers along the line of railway. He asserted that it was imperative to clear the country of inhabitants and of food, because so long as food remained the commandoes would be able to continue in the field. He could not be responsible for stock unless it was brought in, adding that he hoped at the end of the war to be able to divide the remaining stock among the various sufferers.

No one, he promised, would be sent out of the country, but all who had fought fairly, including the leaders, would receive the consideration due their rank.

The committee, which included General Cronje's brother, cordially thanked Lord Kitchener and promised to print the speech in Dutch and to circulate it everywhere.

Since the meeting orders have been issued against the burning of farm houses, unless it should be proved that the actual inhabitants had committed misdeeds.

The first districts cleared under Lord Kitchener's plan were Jagersfontein and Fauresmith, whose inhabitants were laagered at Fauresmith.

Storm of Liquidation in Stock Market. Number of Prices Were Going Downward, Thursday.

New York, Jan. 4.—The long-expected storm of liquidation broke over the stock market Thursday and swept prices in a torrent of selling on a downward course, which was not effectually checked even at the close of the market. The wiping out of margin with the decrease in the face of value of stocks forced them to sale to prevent losses by the brokers. Whether any of the liquidation beyond this was forced would be difficult to say.

The money market maintained a calm surface, the call loan rate ruling at 5 1/2 per cent or below that. There was a continued shifting of loans, however, incident to the enormous financial transactions involved in the yearly settlement and the disturbance of loans thus caused added to the unsettled feeling in the stock market.

The aggregate sum called for by the checks passed through the clearing house banks Thursday reached $380,132,005, which, with the single exception of Wednesday, was the largest total on record, exceeding the previous maximum by over $15,000,000.

There were various contributory causes assigned to account for the violent break, but all of them together would have proved ineffectual to induce selling in the speculative mood which has prevailed in Wall street for many weeks past.

The real root of the trouble was that faith in the level of prices began to be impaired and a conviction was borne in upon speculators that the large demand for stocks which they have expected to continue during January has been pretty largely discounted.

The extreme decline in Rubber was 7 1/4 in Rubber preferred, 9 1/4 in Sugar, 6 1/4 Metropolitan Street Railway, 6 1/4 Federal Steel, 5 and in most of the leading industrial stocks between 2 and 5 points. In the railroad list those stocks which have recently been under most palpable manipulation were naturally most effected.

The most notable decline from the high point were Erie first preferred, 4 1/4; Delaware and Hudson, 4; Northern Pacific, 3 1/4; Baltimore and Ohio and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 3 1/4; Iowa Central preferred, 3 1/4; Pennsylvania, Reading second preferred, Denver and Rio Grande preferred and Chicago and Great Western preferred "B," 3 1/4; Kansas and Texas preferred, 3 1/4; Union Pacific, 3 1/4, and throughout the railroad list from 1 to 3 points. The closing was in many cases near the lowest.

The bond market was very active and liquidation was in force there as well as in stocks, but the declines in prices were by no means so marked. Total sales, par value, $3,955,000.

United States refunded 2s declined 1/4 and new 4s regular 1/4 on the last call.

THE WEATHER.

Western Pennsylvania—Fair in southern, probably snow flurries with rising temperature in northern portion today; winds generally southerly, fresh to brisk on the lakes. Tomorrow generally fair.

Ohio—Fair today, except possibly snow flurries along the lake; warmer in northern portion; winds becoming southerly, fresh to brisk along the lake. Tomorrow fair, except possibly snow flurries along the northeastern lake shore.

West Virginia—Fair today; not so cold in eastern portion; southerly winds, becoming westerly. Tomorrow probably fair.

Warren, O., Jan. 4.—William Ritzel, the venerable editor of the Warren Chronicle, died of pneumonia, aged 73 years. He had been in active newspaper work for 50 years, and had served two terms in the legislature.

IS WALDERSEE DEAD?

Such a Rumor Printed In Paris Paper.

ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN KILLED.

According to the Rumor an Officer of the Allied Forces Did the Killing. Rumor Also Current in Berlin, but Was Not Confirmed.

Paris, Jan. 4.—Le Journal reported, under reserve, the death of Count von Waldersee, the rumor being that he was killed by an officer of the allied troops, the circumstances not being related.

It was said that the rumor was current in Berlin, where it was not confirmed.

CHINESE MUST SIGN NOTE.

Will Be Notified to Do So Before a Joint Meeting Can Be Held.

Pekin, Jan. 4.—The foreign envoys, with the exception of the British minister, Sir Ernest Satow, met to consider the time and place for the acceptance and signing of the joint note. Nothing definite was decided. It seemed to be the opinion of some of the envoys that the acceptance of the terms of the note by the Chinese was not explicit enough. The Chinese desire for consultations regarding the razing of the forts and the legation guards was open to misinterpretation and liable to lead to long and continuous arguments, which might, in the opinion of some of the ministers, simply mean sparring for time on the part of the Chinese.

Consequently the Chinese plenipotentiaries will be notified that they must sign the note before the meeting between them and the foreign envoys can be held.

Sir Ernest Satow, who had been suffering from chills and fever, was better.

The military engineers of the allies agreed upon a plan for the future defenses of the legations.

Troops Sent to Investigate Reports of Murders and Try to Secure Arrests.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Some officials here were surprised when they saw the press reports stating that the American troops in Peking, which were distinctly designated as legation guards, and as such were to have no part in ordinary military operations, had gone out into the country to co-operate with a German expeditionary force. The following cablegram was received from General Chaffee:

"Adjutant General, Washington. 'Colonel Theodore J. Wint returned. Movement simply to verify report Christians had been murdered and secure arrest guilty parties if allegation found true. Germans from Tien Tsin had been in country. Take no part in offensive operations; patrol country between Peking, Hoshi Wu and Chang Kiawan occasionally for the purpose of order. 'Chaffee.'"

THREE KNOWN TO BE DEAD.

Two Fatal Mine Accidents—Six Others Were Still in One of the Mines.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three men entered the Pine Ridge colliery of the Algonquin Coal company at Miners Mills to make some repairs. They did not come to the surface when expected. A number of rescuers went down to investigate. They, too, failed to come back. Then another rescuing party went down.

Last evening they found the dead bodies of D. J. Williams, the foreman, and William Morgan, fire boss. The men were victims of fire damp. There were six other men in the mine and it was believed they perished, too.

The mouth of the mine was surrounded by the relatives of the men entombed and their grief was heart-rending.

An explosion of gas occurred in No. 2 mine of the Delaware and Hudson company at Plymouth. John Redusky, foreman of a gang of laborers, entered an abandoned chamber with a naked lamp and ignited the gas. Redusky was instantly killed. The following were injured: Andrew Rudsky, Joe Eustace, Joseph Lyonsdale, Philip Klein, Martin Duddy and Michael Kelly.

REMME PUT UNDER ARREST.

Bank Examiner Tucker Made Information in the Newport, Ky., Bank Defalcation Case.

Cincinnati, Jan. 4.—Edward C. Remme, cashier of the German National bank of Newport, Ky., was arrested by United States Marshal Compton upon a warrant issued at the instance of Bank Examiner Tucker. Owing to the shortage of Frank M. Brown of $195,000 as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, who disappeared, the bank was recently placed in the hands of Tucker as receiver. Bank Examiner Tucker said last night:

"On April 26, 1899, I arranged with Cashier Remme to examine the books of the bank privately. Remme and I were the only one who knew of the arrangement. On April 29 the books were taken to Cincinnati and examined in private. I have since discovered that between April 26 and 29 60 false entries were made, covering a shortage of over $90,000. Some of them must have informed Brown that the books were to be examined, so as to give him an opportunity to make the false entries. This is the basis of my affidavit against Remme."

Mr. Remme said: "I am innocent and did not know of the Brown shortage before the directors knew it, and gave Brown intimation of the secret investigation of the books."

Mr. Remme has been assisting Receiver Tucker in closing up the affairs of the old bank and organizing the new one, and was at work in the bank when arrested. He was released on $25,000 bail, which he was unable to secure until last night.

Petitions had been numerous signed by the old depositors for Remme to be the cashier of the reorganized bank, and his arrest came as a surprise to the community.

OVER $300,000 FOR MISSIONS.

Attacks on a Chapel in Granada, Spain Reported.

Boston, Jan. 4.—The nineteenth annual report of the American board of foreign missions was made public. The donations received during the year aggregated $317,913. The report said in part:

"Never before since the revolution in Spain in the year 1899 has there been such open and violent hatred expressed against not only the gospel, but all liberalizing thought and action. In Granada the mob led off by students of the schools and universities two or three different times in the course of one month attacked the Protestant chapel in broad daylight, tearing down the sign that was inside of the public door, stoned the house, breaking windows and making such a noise as to alarm the neighborhood."

$25,000 AND CERTAIN PROPERTY.

McCullough Bondsmen and Blair County (Pa.) Commissioners Agree.

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 4.—The McCullough bondsmen and the county commissioners arrived at a settlement. The former will pay $25,000 in cash and transfer to the county a lot on Fourteenth avenue, Altoona, and 12 lots in Calverton, valued at $5,000, which were formerly owned by McCullough. In addition the bondsmen also gave a bond in the sum of $9,500 to cover any shortage in case the defalcation reaches $40,000. Judge Bell approved the settlement. McCullough was still missing.

Accomplice in Dowleite Riot Indicted.

Mansfield, O., Jan. 4.—The jury in the case of Allen Andrews, indicted in connection with the Dowleite riots last fall, returned a verdict of guilty. Andrews resisted the officer, who was protecting a Dowleite elder. The others indicted for participation in Dowleite riots will be indicted.

EVENTS IN BRIEF.

The president informed the senate that he deemed it unwise to make public the Lawshe report on Cuban frauds.

An unknown girl, about 20 years old, was instantly killed on Western avenue, near Grant avenue, Allegheny City, Pa., when she attempted to get off a street car.

Over a week ago, Olive, the 10-year-old motherless daughter of Lewis Zeigler, former postmaster and prominent politician of Dubois, Pa., was assaulted by an unknown fiend, and she lies at her home in a very critical condition.

At Sharon, Pa., the scale recently submitted for the present year by the National Steel company to its employees was signed. The men signed the scale at a reduction of 10 per cent over the wages paid last year.

The American Bridge company signed the scale presented by Pittsburgh Local No. 3 of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' union. Their wages have been advanced from 27 1/2 cents an hour for a 10-hour day to 33 1/3 cents an hour for a 9-hour day. This was agreed to at a conference in New York between President Percival Roberts, of the American Bridge company, and a committee of workmen, George Buchan, of Pittsburgh, has signed. It was believed other firms at Pittsburgh, one at Columbus and one at Beaver Falls would also sign. Good Intent and East Finley will be discontinued.

Denver, Jan. 4.—Stanley S. Stokes, one of the most widely known newspaper men in Colorado, died at his home in this city, aged 52 years. He was born at Cayuga, N. Y. He came to Colorado in 1872.

MILITARY AUTHORITIES PREPARING

Were Getting Ready to Meet Contingencies—Farmers From Carnarvon Described Boers as Traveling and Seizing Horses and Estates.

Cape Town, Jan. 4.—The military authorities were preparing for all contingencies. It was decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

Farmers coming in to Carnarvon described the Boers as traveling in parallel columns, with numerous flanking parties sweeping the country of horses, plundering loyalists and carrying off estates. It appeared that they were accompanied by strings of pack horses lightly loaded.

A message from Colesberg stated that Kritzinger's commando was crossing the Middleburg district, but was getting few if any recruits.

Here in Cape Town such business men as were unable to leave were organizing a town guard composed of the leading citizens. The commercial companies asked the mayor to call a mass meeting to urge the government to suppress disloyal newspapers and to proclaim martial law.

London, Jan. 4.—Advices from Cape Town this morning were more hopeful, owing to the active recruiting of local forces in all quarters, and a better feeling prevailed in London, based upon the prospect of Lord Roberts taking the reins at the war office.

From Sydney, N. S. W., it was reported that there was quite a rush of men there anxious to join the new contingents, about 5,000 having volunteered. The reports of Lord Kitchener's conference with Burghers also tended to remove anxiety.

According to The Daily Express, Lord Kitchener had warned the mine owners that they must not count upon military protection.

London, Jan. 4.—The censorship permitted news of peace tentatives to emanate from Pretoria, containing the following in part:

About the middle of December a number of prominent Burghers who had submitted and were living in the Pretoria district formed a peace committee. Mr. Van Rensburg, a former member of the first volksraad of the Transvaal, was elected president of the committee, which included other prominent former members of the volksraad. The committee resolved to attempt negotiations, and accordingly, in response to a suggestion, Lord Kitchener attended a meeting of the committee Dec. 21 and addressed the meeting. His speech contained the following in part:

He proceeded to point out the folly of the continuance of guerilla warfare, since the British government would never permit the re-establishment of the Boer government.

Mr. Chamberlain's statements in parliament, Lord Kitchener contended, clearly showed that there was no wish to oppress the Burghers. On the contrary, the British proposals foreshadowed an enlightened government, in which the Burghers would have a prominent share, insuring the rights of property and the ancient laws and customs of the Burghers.

Lord Kitchener urged that it was useless to continue the present inhuman struggle, pointing out that the powers had refused Mr. Kruger's requests for intervention. The Burghers, he said, had fought a good fight, but they had been overpowered, and there was no dishonor in the leaders recognizing that fact. He reminded them that there were hosts of Boer prisoners waiting to be restored to their families.

Referring to his proclamations to the country, Lord Kitchener said that unfortunately these had not been allowed to reach the Burghers and he trusted that the committee would make known the facts to the Boers in the field, as he desired to give them every chance to surrender and wished to finish the war by the most humane means possible. He promised to give the committee notice if compelled to abandon the conciliatory for harsher measures. Going on to explain his recent proclamations, confirming the statement that those who had broken oaths of neutrality would be treated in the same way as the others, he told the committee that all would be accommodated with their families, in protected laagers along the line of railway. He asserted that it was imperative to clear the country of inhabitants and of food, because so long as food remained the commandoes would be able to continue in the field. He could not be responsible for stock unless it was brought in, adding that he hoped at the end of the war to be able to divide the remaining stock among the various sufferers.

No one, he promised, would be sent out of the country, but all who had fought fairly, including the leaders, would receive the consideration due their rank.

The committee, which included General Cronje's brother, cordially thanked Lord Kitchener and promised to print the speech in Dutch and to circulate it everywhere.

Since the meeting orders have been issued against the burning of farm houses, unless it should be proved that the actual inhabitants had committed misdeeds.

The first districts cleared under Lord Kitchener's plan were Jagersfontein and Fauresmith, whose inhabitants were laagered at Fauresmith.

New York, Jan. 4.—The long-expected storm of liquidation broke over the stock market Thursday and swept prices in a torrent of selling on a downward course, which was not effectively checked even at the close of the market. The wiping out of margin with the decrease in the face of value of stocks forced them to sale to prevent losses by the brokers. Whether any of the liquidation beyond this was forced would be difficult to say.

The money market maintained a calm surface, the call loan rate ruling at 5 1/2 per cent or below that. There was a continued shifting of loans, however, incident to the enormous financial transactions involved in the yearly settlement and the disturbance of loans thus caused added to the unsettled feeling in the stock market. The aggregate sum called for by the checks passed through the clearing house banks Thursday reached $380,132,005, which, with the single exception of Wednesday, was the largest total on record, exceeding the previous maximum by over $15,000,000. There were various contributory causes assigned to account for the violent break, but all of them together would have proved ineffectual to induce selling in the speculative mood which has prevailed in Wall street for many weeks past. The real root of the trouble was that faith in the level of prices began to be impaired and a conviction was borne in upon speculators that the large demand for stocks which they have expected to continue during January has been pretty largely discounted.

The extreme decline in Rubber was 7 1/4, in Rubber preferred, 9 1/4; in Sugar, 6 1/4, Metropolitan Street Railway, 6 1/4; Federal Steel, 5, and in most of the leading industrial stocks between 2 and 5 points. In the railroad list those stocks which have recently been under most palpable manipulation were naturally most effected. The most notable decline from the high point were Erie first preferred, 1 1/4; Delaware and Hudson, 4; Northern Pacific, 3 1/4; Baltimore and Ohio and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 3 1/4; Iowa Central preferred, 3 1/4; Pennsylvania, Reading second preferred, Denver and Rio Grande preferred and Chicago and Great Western preferred "B," 3 1/4; Kansas and Texas preferred, 3 1/4; Union Pacific, 3 1/4, and throughout the railroad list from 1 to 3 points. The closing was in many cases near the lowest.

The bond market was very active and liquidation was in force there as well as in stocks, but the declines in prices were by no means so marked. Total sales, par value, $3,955,000.

United States refunded 2s declined 1/4 and new 4s regular 1/4 on the last cell.

CHINESE MUST SIGN NOTE.

Will Be Notified to Do So Before a Joint Meeting Can Be Held.

Pekin, Jan. 4.—The foreign envoys, with the exception of the British minister, Sir Ernest Satow, met to consider the time and place for the acceptance and signing of the joint note. Nothing definite was decided. It seemed to be the opinion of some of the envoys that the acceptance of the terms of the note by the Chinese was not explicit enough. The Chinese desire for consultations regarding the razing of the forts and the legation guards was open to misinterpretation and liable to lead to long and continuous arguments, which might, in the opinion of some of the ministers, simply mean sparring for time on the part of the Chinese.

Consequently the Chinese plenipotentiaries will be notified that they must sign the note before the meeting between them and the foreign envoys can be held.

Sir Ernest Satow, who had been suffering from chills and fever, was better.

Troops Sent to Investigate Reports of Murders and Try to Secure Arrests.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Some officials here were surprised when they saw the press reports stating that the American troops in Peking, which were distinctly designated as legation guards, and as such were to have no part in ordinary military operations, had gone out into the country to co-operate with a German expeditionary force. The following cablegram was received from General Chaffee:

"Pekin, Jan. 2.

"Adjutant General, Washington. "Colonel Theodore J. Wint returned. Movement simply to verify report Christians had been murdered and secure arrest guilty parties if allegation found true. Germans from Tien Tsin had been in country. Take no part in offensive operations; patrol country between Peking, Hoshi Wu and Chang Kiawan occasionally for the purpose of order. "Chaffee."

THREE KNOWN TO BE DEAD.

Two Fatal Mine Accidents—Six Others Were Still in One of the Mines.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three men entered the Pine Ridge colliery of the Algonquin Coal company at Miners Mills to make some repairs. They did not come to the surface when expected. A number of rescuers went down to investigate. They, too, failed to come back. Then another rescuing party went down.

Last evening they found the dead bodies of D. J. Williams, the foreman, and William Morgan, fire boss. The men were victims of fire damp. There were six other men in the mine and it was believed they perished, too.

The mouth of the mine was surrounded by the relatives of the men entombed and their grief was heart-rending.

An explosion of gas occurred in No. 2 mine of the Delaware and Hudson company at Plymouth. John Redusky, foreman of a gang of laborers, entered an abandoned chamber with a naked lamp and ignited the gas. Redusky was instantly killed. The following were injured: Andrew Rudsky, Joe Eustace, Joseph Lyonsdale, Philip Klein, Martin Duddy and Michael Kelly.

REMME PUT UNDER ARREST.

Bank Examiner Tucker Made Inmate in the Newport, Ky., Bank Detention Case.

Cincinnati, Jan. 4.—Edward C. Remme, cashier of the German National bank of Newport, Ky., was arrested by United States Marshal Compton upon a warrant issued at the instance of Bank Examiner Tucker. Owing to the shortage of Frank M. Brown of $195,000 as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, who disappeared, the bank was recently placed in the hands of Tucker as receiver. Bank Examiner Tucker said last night:

"On April 26, 1899, I arranged with Cashier Remme to examine the books of the bank privately. Remme and I were the only one who knew of the arrangement. On April 29 the books were taken to Cincinnati and examined in private. I have since discovered that between April 26 and 29 60 false entries were made, covering a shortage of over $90,000. Some of them must have informed Brown that the books were to be examined, so as to give him an opportunity to make false entries. This is the basis of my affidavit against Remme."

Mr. Remme said: "I am innocent and did not know of the Brown shortage before the directors knew it, and gave Brown no intimation of the secret investigation of the books."

Mr. Remme has been assisting Receiver Tucker in closing up the affairs of the old bank and organizing the new one, and was at work in the bank when arrested. He was released on $25,000 bail, which he was unable to secure until last night.

Petitions had been numerous signed by the old depositors for Remme to be the cashier of the reorganized bank, and his arrest came as a surprise to the community.

OVER $300,000 FOR MISSIONS.

Attacks on a Chapel in Granada, Spain Reported.

Boston, Jan. 4.—The nineteenth annual report of the American board of foreign missions was made public. The donations received during the year aggregated $317,913. The report said in part:

"Never before since the revolution in Spain in the year 1899 has there been such open and violent hatred expressed against not only the gospel, but all liberalizing thought and action. In Granada the mob led off by students of the schools and universities two or three different times in the course of one month attacked the Protestant chapel in broad daylight, tearing down the sign that was inside of the public door, stoned the house, breaking windows and making such a noise as to alarm the neighborhood."

McCullough Bondsmen and Blair County (Pa.) Commissioners Agree.

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 4.—The McCullough bondsmen and the county commissioners arrived at a settlement. The former will pay $25,000 in cash and transfer to the county a lot on Fourteenth avenue, Altoona, and 12 lots in Calverton, valued at $5,000, which were formerly owned by McCullough. In addition the bondsmen also gave a bond in the sum of $25,000 to cover any shortage in case the defalcation reaches $40,000. Judge Bell approved the settlement. McCullough was still missing.

Accomplice in Dowleite Riot Indicted.

Mansfield, O., Jan. 4.—The jury in the case of Allen Andrews, indicted in connection with the Dowleite riots last fall, returned a verdict of guilty. Andrews resisted the officer who was protecting a Dowleite elder. The others indicted for participation in Dowleite riots will be indicted.

EVENTS IN BRIEF.

The president informed the senate that he deemed it unwise to make public the Lawshe report on Cuban frauds.

THREE KNOWN TO BE DEAD.

Two Fatal Mine Accidents—Six Others Were Still in One of the Mines.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three men entered the Pine Ridge colliery of the Algonquin Coal company at Miners Mills to make some repairs. They did not come to the surface when expected. A number of rescuers went down to investigate. They, too, failed to come back. Then another rescuing party went down.

Last evening they found the dead bodies of D. J. Williams, the foreman, and William Morgan, fire boss. The men were victims of fire damp. There were six other men in the mine and it was believed they perished, too.

The mouth of the mine was surrounded by the relatives of the men entombed and their grief was heart-rending.

An explosion of gas occurred in No. 2 mine of the Delaware and Hudson company at Plymouth. John Redusky, foreman of a gang of laborers, entered an abandoned chamber with a naked lamp and ignited the gas. Redusky was instantly killed. The following were injured: Andrew Rudsky, Joe Eustace, Joseph Lyonsdale, Philip Klein, Martin Duddy and Michael Kelly.

REMME PUT UNDER ARREST.

Bank Examiner Tucker Made Informant in the Newport, Ky., Bank Defalcation Case.

Cincinnati, Jan. 4.—Edward C. Remme, cashier of the German National bank of Newport, Ky., was arrested by United States Marshal Compton upon a warrant issued at the instance of Bank Examiner Tucker. Owing to the shortage of Frank M. Brown of $195,000 as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, who disappeared, the bank was recently placed in the hands of Tucker as receiver. Bank Examiner Tucker said last night:

"On April 26, 1899, I arranged with Cashier Remme to examine the books of the bank privately. Remme and I were the only one who knew of the arrangement. On April 29 the books were taken to Cincinnati and examined in private. I have since discovered that between April 26 and 29 60 false entries were made, covering a shortage of over $90,000. Some of them must have informed Brown that the books were to be examined, so as to give him an opportunity to make the false entries. This is the basis of my affidavit against Remme."

Mr. Remme said: "I am innocent and did not know of the Brown shortage before the directors knew it, and gave Brown no intimation of the secret investigation of the books."

Mr. Remme has been assisting Receiver Tucker in closing up the affairs of the old bank and organizing the new one, and was at work in the bank when arrested. He was released on $25,000 bail, which he was unable to secure until last night.

Petitions had been numerous, signed by the old depositors for Remme to be the cashier of the reorganized bank, and his arrest came as a surprise to the community.

OVER $300,000 FOR MISSIONS.

Attacks on a Chapel in Granada, Spain Reported.

Boston, Jan. 4.—The nineteenth annual report of the American board of foreign missions was made public. The donations received during the year aggregated $317,913. The report said in part:

"Never before since the revolution that initiated the new order of things in Spain in the year 1809 has there been such open and violent hatred expressed against not only the gospel, but all liberalizing thought and action. In Granada the mob led by students of the schools and universities two or three different times in the course of one month attacked the Protestant chapel in broad daylight, tearing down the sign that was inside of the public door, stoned the house, breaking windows and making such a noise as to alarm the neighborhood."

McCullough Bondsman and Blair County (Pa.) Commissioners Agree.

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 4.—The McCullough bondsmen and the county commissioners arrived at a settlement. The former will pay $25,000 in cash and transfer to the county a lot on Fourteenth avenue, Altoona, and 12 lots in Calverton, valued at $5,000, which were formerly owned by McCullough. In addition the bondsmen also gave a bond in the sum of $9,500 to cover any shortage in case the defalcation reaches $40,000. Judge Bell approved the settlement. McCullough was still missing.

Accomplice in Dowleite Riot Indicted.

Maunfield, O., Jan. 4.—The jury in the case of Allen Andrews, indicted in connection with the Dowleite riots last fall, returned a verdict of guilty. Andrews resisted the officer, who was protecting a Dowleite elder. The others indicted for participation in Dowleite riots will be indicted.

EVENTS IN BRIEF.

The president informed the senate that he deemed it unwise to make public the Laws report on Cuban frauds.

An unknown girl, about 20 years old, was instantly killed on Western avenue, near Grant avenue, Allegheny City, Pa., when she attempted to get off a street car.

Over a week ago, Olive, the 10-year-old motherless daughter of Lewis Zeigler, former postmaster and prominent politician of Dubois, Pa., was assaulted by an unknown fiend, and she lies at her home in a very critical condition.

At Sharon, Pa., the scale recently submitted for the present year by the National Steel company to its employees was signed. The men signed the scale at a reduction of 10 per cent over the wages paid last year.

THE GRAND SCHEMER

HE UNFOLDS A PLAN WITH MILLIONS IN IT TO A CREDITOR.

(Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.)

As the man turned into the doorway leading up to Major Crofoot's office he had a look of determination on his face. As he ascended the well worn stairs his tread showed aggressiveness. As he banged the major's door open and entered he had the air of a creditor who'd get his money or carry away his pound of flesh. The major was in. He sat at his desk smoking a very short stub of cigar, but as the door opened he whirled with a bland smile on his face, and, rising, with both hands held out, he exclaimed:

"Well, now, but this is truly a coincidence—a coincidence! Come right in, my dear fellow—come right in!"

"Oh, I'll come in fast enough," answered the caller as he suited the action to the words and came to a halt

"AS THE WHEELS TURN A MOUTH ORGAN PLAYS."

In the middle of the room. "Now, then, no more skulking and dodging. You owe me $10 borrowed money, and I want it right off the reel."

"My dear Mr. Shine," said the major as he took a last puff at his stub, "you formerly had an office next door. We became acquainted. You learned that I was temporarily embarrassed, and, sizing me up as an honest, ambitious man, who would ultimately overcome his bad luck, you kindly forced a $10 bill upon me one day."

"I deny it!" shouted Mr. Shine. "Why, hang it, you were annoying me every day for a month before I let you have the money, and you told me a thousand lies to get it!"

"When you so kindly forced that money upon me," continued the major as he smiled and walked, "I said to myself that some day I would repay you a thousandfold. It was your trust, your confidence, in me that touched me. I was almost unknown to you. For all you knew I might be a dead-beat. You had only your judgment to go on, but your judgment was right. This very morning I should have telegraphed you to call in."

"Oh, you are going to pay, eh?" "Major Crofoot always pays his debts, sir, and in some cases he returns $100 for $1. It will be so in this case. I could have paid you back long ago, but was waiting to make it a memorable occasion for you. The time has arrived. My dear fellow, let us shake hands."

"What for? You owe me $10. You say you are going to pay it. I don't see the object of shaking hands."

"Yes, you truly cast your bread upon the waters," said the major as he paced the width of the room and looked into vacancy, "and I am pleased that your return will be so great. Do you know I love a man who trusts to my honor and integrity? Let a man show his confidence in me, and I would sell my shirt for him. Yes, you kindly forced $10 upon me, and—"

"And now you kindly force it back again," interrupted Mr. Shine. "It's no use dodging, old man. I'm here for my money and am going to have it."

"My dear fellow, you are one of the few who trusted to my integrity when I was down on my luck, and I therefore pass over your hard words now. You haven't heard of the Great American Combination Baby Carriage Company, have you?"

"No, sir."

"Because it is just being incorporated and we are taking the greatest care not to let anything get out until we are ready. My own creation, sir, and the biggest thing of the decade. If we don't make a million dollars out of it the first year, I shall be more than surprised. I wouldn't take half a million in cash for my chances."

"That's all blamed nonsense!" shouted Mr. Shine as he began to bristle up. "I know you, you old soft sooper! You want to dodge that $10, but I'll have it before I leave!"

"My own inventive idea, as I told you, and it will astonish the world. The baby carriage can be changed into a cradle, a hammock or a sled by moving a lever. Good for summer or winter, you see. Is provided with a stationary milk bottle, a whistle and a rattlebox. Has an ice chest and a soothing sirup department. As the wheels turn a mouth organ plays. Provided with a patent brake, rubber tires and a mothproof cover; also has revolving fans to keep the flies away. After the baby gets out of long dresses he can use the carriage as a tricycle. That's the invention, Mr. Shine. Organized on a capital of $750,000, and shares to be sold at par. There's more than millions in it."

"I don't care a rap if there is. What I want is my $10, and I'll give you just five minutes to shell out."

"I was going to offer you the secretaryship," softly observed the major, "but the salary will be only ten thousand a year. What I shall offer you and what I was going to telegraph you about as you came in was the purchasing agency. We shall want a man to buy the milk and soothing sirup and see that they are pure. The salary will be at least $15,000 per year, with perquisites thrown in. My dear man, you trusted me. This is your reward. Now, will you shake?"

"Not by a darned sight!" shouted Mr. Shine as he bobbed around. "None of this sort of rot will stand me off on my $10. Do you want me to take it out of your hide?"

"And you can buy stock at par, my dear fellow—stock that will be worth 150 inside of four weeks. I have arranged for that. That stock will pay you at least 100 per cent. Invest $10,000, and you have an income of $25,000 per year. That's what comes of trusting to the integrity of Major Crofoot. Is it enough? If not, just say so, and I'll add $5,000 from my salary as president."

Mr. Shine deliberately removed his coat and vest and flung them on a chair.

"Or if you want to borrow $10 for a day or two you can have it and welcome. I'll just step out and get it for you."

The major stepped, and Mr. Shine removed his collar, tie and cuffs. Then he spat on his hands and limbered up his arms and waited. He waited for half an hour—two hours. Then he got up and redressed himself and kicked over the chairs and desk and went out. The major had stood him off once more.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Many Things of Which Its Graduates Are Ignorant.

The failure of the Sunday school as a means of giving a systematic and thorough knowledge of the Bible is great. A teacher in a city high school asked an advanced class of 40 or 50 pupils, who had been drilled for years in the International Sunday School Lessons, how to proceed in order to reach Palestine, and not one could give the desired information. Then she asked the class in what part of the world Palestine is located, and no one knew.

That is a very good specimen of Sunday school teaching and can be paralleled anywhere by those who will take the trouble to ask a few questions. The ignorance of the Bible on the part of most persons of average intelligence is something amazing. The simplest questions will elicit no answer on the part of most such persons.

That educated persons know something about the Bible may be assumed, but not unless the training goes much beyond the standard of the common school. Again and again it has transpired that those who were generally well informed, who were fairly well educated and regarded as bright and clever, were almost totally ignorant of the Bible. Their Sunday school training had given them no knowledge of the book that was of any value, and, however much they might have read it since, it was to them a sealed volume.

A Jockey's Sensation When Riding.

"If you ride with your head down—that is to say, bent slightly, so that the wind does not beat right on to your face—you can breathe easily, but if you hold your mouth wide open and let the air beat right in your face then you will have great difficulty in breathing, and if the race is a long one you will become exhausted by the end of the ride." So said a well known jockey when questioned on the subject of what his sensations were when riding in a race.

"A mile race on a good horse is run in about 1 minute and 40 seconds. A mile in 1 minute and 40 seconds is at the rate of 36 miles an hour, so, you see, a race horse travels at train speed."

"If you want to know how it feels to go through the air at race horse speed just hang your head out of a railway carriage window, turning your face toward the way the train is traveling. At the same time imagine that you are sitting in a saddle and have to hold on to your horse and guide him on to victory if possible, keeping him from being run down or interfered with."

"It is no easy task to ride a horse in a race. The jockey must have all his wits about him. He does not have much time to think how he feels. When riding in a neck and neck race down the home stretch. I forget everything except that I must strain every nerve to pass the other horses. No thought is then given to the plaudits from the grand stand."

The Gentle Reader.

What has become of the gentle reader? asks Samuel M. Crothers in The Atlantic. One does not like to think that he has passed away with the stagecoach and the weekly news letter and that henceforth we are to be confronted only with the stony glare of the intelligent reading public. Once upon a time—that is to say, a generation or two ago—he was very highly esteemed. To him books were dedicated with long rambling prefaces and with episodes which were their own excuse for being. In the very middle of the story the writer would stop with a word of apology or explanation addressed to the gentle reader or at the very least with a nod or a wink no matter if the fate of the hero be in suspense or the plot be inextricably involved.

"Hang the plot!" says the author. "I must have a chat with the gentle reader and find out what he thinks about it."

And so confidences were interchanged, and there was gossip about the universe and suggestions in regard to the queerness of human nature until at last the author would jump up with: "Enough of this, gentle reader; perhaps it's time to go back to the story."

Miss Kingsley and the Gorillas.

On the Gabon river Miss Mary Kingsley's guide one day called to her to creep quietly through the bushes and then she saw a family of five gorillas—an old male, three females and a young one. The guide sneezed, which alarmed the gorillas, and they fled with a bark and a howl, the old male swinging from bough to bough like an acrobat on a trapeze.

On another day Miss Kingsley and her two guides came suddenly upon a solitary male gorilla, who, as usual, had appropriated a forest glade as a park for his private enjoyment. Furious at the intrusion, the brute, instead of fleeing, came shambling toward them, growling fiercely. "Shoot him," whispered Miss Kingsley. "I dare not," said the guide, "until he comes quite close. I have only one gun. The other is out of order. If I miss, he will kill us."

The gorilla came nearer. Rearing himself on his hind legs he beat his breast and roared, just as Du Chailu described long ago. Then, running forward, he stopped and reared again and again ran forward until quite close. Then the guide fired and the gorilla dropped dead.—Chambers' Journal.

Interested.

Mrs. Newrich—I never can remember how many cards to leave when calling. Old Gentleman—The rules are very simple, madam. You hand one to the servant and then on departing leave as many on the plate as there are adult members of the family, adding two of your husband's cards and occasionally dumping in a few more for good measure. Do not be niggardly in dealing out cards, as that suggests vulgar poverty.

"No, madam. I am Mr. Bristol, the card manufacturer."—Exchange.

THE GRAND SCHEMER

HE UNFOLDS A PLAN WITH MILLIONS IN IT TO A CREDITOR.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

As the man turned into the doorway leading up to Major Crofoot's office he had a look of determination on his face. As he ascended the well worn stairs his tread showed aggressiveness. As he banged the major's door open and entered he had the air of a creditor who'd get his money or carry away his pound of flesh. The major was in. He sat at his desk smoking a very short stub of cigar, but as the door opened he whirled with a bland smile on his face, and, rising, with both hands held out, he exclaimed:

"Well, now, but this is truly a coincidence—a coincidence! Come right in, my dear fellow—come right in!"

in the middle of the room. "Now, then, no more skulking and dodging. You owe me $10 borrowed money, and I want it right off the reel."

"My dear Mr. Shine," said the major as he took a last puff at his stub, "you formerly had an office next door. We became acquainted. You learned that I was temporarily embarrassed, and, sizing me up as an honest, ambitious man, who would ultimately overcome his bad luck, you kindly forced a $10 bill upon me one day."

"I deny it!" shouted Mr. Shine. "Why, hang it, you were annoying me every day for a month before I let you have the money, and you told me a thousand lies to get it!"

"When you so kindly forced that money upon me," continued the major as he smiled and walked, "I said to myself that some day I would repay you a thousandfold. It was your trust, your confidence, in me that touched me. I was almost unknown to you. For all you knew I might be a dead-beat. You had only your judgment to go on, but your judgment was right. This very morning I should have telegraphed you to call in."

"Oh, you are going to pay, eh?"

"Major Crofoot always pays his debts, sir, and in some cases he returns $100 for $1. It will be so in this case. I could have paid you back long ago, but was waiting to make it a memorable occasion for you. The time has arrived. My dear fellow, let us shake hands."

"Yes, you truly cast your bread upon the waters," said the major as he paced the width of the room and looked into vacancy, "and I am pleased that your returns will be so great. Do you know I love a man who trusts to my honor and integrity? Let a man show his confidence in me, and I would sell my shirt for him. Yes, you kindly forced $10 upon me, and,—"

"And now you kindly force it back again," interrupted Mr. Shine. "It's no use dodging, old man. I'm here for my money and am going to have it."

"My dear fellow, you are one of the few who trusted to my integrity when I was down on my luck, and I therefore pass over your hard words now. You haven't heard of the Great American Combination Baby Carriage company, have you?"

"No, sir."

"Because it is just being incorporated and we are taking the greatest care not to let anything get out until we are ready. My own creation, sir, and the

"That's all blamed nonsense!" shouted Mr. Shine as he began to bristle up. "I know you, you old soft sooper! You want to dodge that $10, but I'll have it before I leave!"

"My own inventive idea, as I told you, and it will astonish the world. The baby carriage can be changed into a cradle, a hammock or a sled by moving a lever. Good for summer or winter, you see. Is provided with a stationary milk bottle, a whistle and a rattlebox. Has an ice chest and a soothing sirup department. As the wheels turn a mouth organ plays. Provided with a patent brake, rubber tires and a mothproof cover; also has revolving fans to keep the flies away. After the baby gets out of long dresses he can use the carriage as a tricycle. That's the invention, Mr. Shine. Organized on a capital of $750,000, and shares to be sold at par. There's more than millions in it."

"I was going to offer you the secretaryship," softly observed the major, "but the salary will be only ten thousand a year. What I shall offer you and what I was going to telegraph you about as you came in was the purchasing agency. We shall want a man to buy the milk and soothing sirup and see that they are pure. The salary will be at least $15,000 per year, with perquisites thrown in. My dear man, you trusted me. This is your reward. Now, will you shake?"

"Not by a durned sight!" shouted Mr. Shine as he bobbed around. "None of this sort of rot will stand me off on my $10. Do you want me to take it out of your hide?"

"And you can buy stock at par, my dear fellow—stock that will be worth 150 inside of four weeks. I have arranged for that. That stock will pay you at least 100 per cent. Invest $10,000, and you have an income of $25,000 per year. That's what comes of trusting to the integrity of Major Crofoot. Is it enough? If not, just say so, and I'll add $5,000 from my salary as president."

Mr. Shine deliberately removed his coat and vest and flung them on a chair.

"Or if you want to borrow $10 for a day or two you can have it and welcome. I'll just step out and get it for you."

The major stepped, and Mr. Shine removed his collar, tie and cuffs. Then he spat on his hands and limbered up his arms and waited. He waited for half an hour—two hours. Then he got up and redressed himself and kicked over the chairs and desk and went out. The major had stood him off once more.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Many Things of Which Its Graduates Are Ignorant.

The failure of the Sunday school as a means of giving a systematic and thorough knowledge of the Bible is great. A teacher in a city high school asked an advanced class of 40 or 50 pupils, who had been drilled for years in the International Sunday School Lessons, how to proceed in order to reach Palestine, and not one could give the desired information. Then she asked the class in what part of the world Palestine is located, and no one knew.

That is a very good specimen of Sunday school teaching and can be paralleled anywhere by those who will take the trouble to ask a few questions. The ignorance of the Bible on the part of most persons of average intelligence is something amazing. The simplest questions will elicit no answer on the part of most such persons.

That educated persons know something about the Bible may be assumed, but not unless the training goes much beyond the standard of the common school. Again and again it has transpired that those who were generally well informed, who were fairly well educated and regarded as bright and clever, were almost totally ignorant of the Bible. Their Sunday school training had given them no knowledge of the book that was of any value, and, however much they might have read it since, it was to them a sealed volume.

Russia in Europe has a forest area of about 500,000,000 acres. One-third of the country indeed is forest.

A Jockey's Sensation When Riding.

"If you ride with your head down—that is to say, bent slightly, so that the wind does not beat right on to your face—you can breathe easily, but if you hold your mouth wide open and let the air beat right in your face then you will have great difficulty in breathing, and if the race is a long one you will become exhausted by the end of the ride." So said a well known jockey when questioned on the subject of what his sensations were when riding in a race.

"A mile race on a good horse is run in about 1 minute and 40 seconds. A mile in 1 minute and 40 seconds is at the rate of 36 miles an hour, so, you see, a race horse travels at train speed.

"If you want to know how it feels to go through the air at race horse speed just hang your head out of a railway carriage window, turning your face toward the way the train is traveling. At the same time imagine that you are sitting in a saddle and have to hold on to your horse and guide him on to victory if possible, keeping him from being run down or interfered with.

"It is no easy task to ride a horse in a race. The jockey must have all his wits about him. He does not have much time to think how he feels. When riding in a neck and neck race down the home stretch. I forget everything except that I must strain every nerve to pass the other horses. No thought is then given to the plaudits from the grand stand."

The Gentle Reader.

What has become of the gentle reader? asks Samuel M. Crothers in The Atlantic. One does not like to think that he has passed away with the stagecoach and the weekly news letter and that henceforth we are to be confronted only with the stony glare of the intelligent reading public. Once upon a time—that is to say, a generation or two ago—he was very highly esteemed. To him books were dedicated with long rambling prefaces and with episodes which were their own excuse for being. In the very middle of the story the writer would stop with a word of apology or explanation addressed to the gentle reader or at the very least with a nod or a wink no matter if the fate of the hero be in suspense or the plot be inextricably involved.

"Hang the plot!" says the author. "I must have a chat with the gentle reader and find out what he thinks about it."

And so confidences were interchanged, and there was gossip about the universe and suggestions in regard to the queerness of human nature until at last the author would jump up with: "Enough of this, gentle reader; perhaps it's time to go back to the story."

Miss Kingsley and the Gorillas.

On the Gabun river Miss Mary Kingsley's guide one day called to her to creep quietly through the bushes and then she saw a family of five gorillas—an old male, three females and a young one. The guide sneezed, which alarmed the gorillas, and they fled with a bark and a howl, the old male swinging from bough to bough like an acrobat on a trapeze.

On another day Miss Kingsley and her two guides came suddenly upon a solitary male gorilla, who, as usual, had appropriated a forest glade as a park for his private enjoyment. Furious at the intrusion, the brute, instead of fleeing, came shambling toward them, growling fiercely. "Shoot him," whispered Miss Kingsley. "I dare not," said the guide, "until he comes quite close. I have only one gun. The other is out of order. If I miss, he will kill us."

The gorilla came nearer. Rearing himself on his hind legs he beat his breast and roared, just as Du Chailu described long ago. Then, running forward, he stopped and roared again and again ran forward until quite close. Then the guide fired and the gorilla dropped dead.—Chambers' Journal.

Interested.

Mrs. Newrich—I never can remember how many cards to leave when calling. Old Gentleman—The rules are very simple, madam. You hand one to the servant and then on departing leave as many on the plate as there are adult members of the family, adding two of your husband's cards and occasionally dumping in a few more for good measure. Do not be niggardly in dealing out cards, as that suggests vulgar poverty.

"No, madam. I am Mr. Pinstol, the card manufacturer."—Exchange.

"My dear fellow, you are one of the few who trusted to my integrity when I was down on my luck, and I therefore pass over your hard words now. You haven't heard of the Great American Combination Baby Carriage company, have you?"

"No, sir."

"Because it is just being incorporated and we are taking the greatest care not to let anything get out until we are ready. My own creation, sir, and the

"That's all blarney nonsense!" shouted Mr. Shine as he began to bristle up. "I know you, you old soft sooper! You want to dodge that $10, but I'll have it before I leave!"

"My own inventive idea, as I told you, and it will astonish the world. The baby carriage can be changed into a cradle, a hammock or a sled by moving a lever. Good for summer or winter, you see. Is provided with a stationary milk bottle, a whistle and a rattlebox. Has an ice chest and a soothing sirup department. As the wheels turn a mouth organ plays. Provided with a patent brake, rubber tires and a mothproof cover; also has revolving fans to keep the flies away. After the baby gets out of long dresses he can use the carriage as a tricycle. That's the invention, Mr. Shine. Organized on a capital of $750,000, and shares to be sold at par. There's more than millions in it."

"I was going to offer you the secretaryship," softly observed the major, "but the salary will be only ten thousand a year. What I shall offer you and what I was going to telegraph you about as you came in was the purchasing agency. We shall want a man to buy the milk and soothing sirup and see that they are pure. The salary will be at least $15,000 per year, with perquisites thrown in. My dear man, you trusted me. This is your reward. Now, will you shake?"

"Not by a durned sight!" shouted Mr. Shine as he bobbed around. "None of this sort of rot will stand me off on my $10. Do you want me to take it out of your hide?"

"And you can buy stock at par, my dear fellow—stock that will be worth 150 inside of four weeks. I have arranged for that. That stock will pay you at least 100 per cent. Invest $10,000, and you have an income of $25,000 per year. That's what comes of trusting to the integrity of Major Crofoot. Is it enough? If not, just say so, and I'll add $5,000 from my salary as president."

Mr. Shine deliberately removed his coat and vest and flung them on a chair.

"Or if you want to borrow $10 for a day or two you can have it and welcome. I'll just step out and get it for you."

The major stepped, and Mr. Shine removed his collar, tie and cuffs. Then he spat on his hands and limbered up his arms and waited. He waited for half an hour—two hours. Then he got up and redressed himself and kicked over the chairs and desk and went out. The major had stood him off once more.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Many Things of Which Its Graduates Are Ignorant.

The failure of the Sunday school as a means of giving a systematic and thorough knowledge of the Bible is great. A teacher in a city high school asked an advanced class of 40 or 50 pupils, who had been drilled for years in the International Sunday School Lessons, how to proceed in order to reach Palestine, and not one could give the desired information. Then she asked the class in what part of the world Palestine is located, and no one knew.

That is a very good specimen of Sunday school teaching and can be paralleled anywhere by those who will take the trouble to ask a few questions. The ignorance of the Bible on the part of most persons of average intelligence is something amazing. The simplest questions will elicit no answer on the part of most such persons.

That educated persons know something about the Bible may be assumed, but not unless the training goes much beyond the standard of the common school. Again and again it has transpired that those who were generally well informed, who were fairly well educated and regarded as bright and clever, were almost totally ignorant of the Bible. Their Sunday school training had given them no knowledge of the book that was of any value, and, however much they might have read it since, it was to them a sealed volume.

A Jockey's Sensation When Riding.

"If you ride with your head down—that is to say, bent slightly, so that the wind does not beat right on to your face—you can breathe easily, but if you hold your mouth wide open and let the air beat right in your face then you will have great difficulty in breathing, and if the race is a long one you will become exhausted by the end of the ride." So said a well known jockey when questioned on the subject of what his sensations were when riding in a race.

"A mile race on a good horse is run in about 1 minute and 40 seconds. A mile in 1 minute and 40 seconds is at the rate of 36 miles an hour, so, you see, a race horse travels at train speed."

"If you want to know how it feels to go through the air at race horse speed just hang your head out of a railway carriage window, turning your face toward the way the train is traveling. At the same time imagine that you are sitting in a saddle and have to hold on to your horse and guide him on to victory if possible, keeping him from being run down or interfered with."

"It is no easy task to ride a horse in a race. The jockey must have all his wits about him. He does not have much time to think how he feels. When riding in a neck and neck race down the home stretch. I forget everything except that I must strain every nerve to pass the other horses. No thought is then given to the plaudits from the grand stand."

The Gentle Reader.

What has become of the gentle reader? asks Samuel M. Crothers in The Atlantic. One does not like to think that he has passed away with the stagecoach and the weekly news letter and that henceforth we are to be confronted only with the stony glare of the intelligent reading public. Once upon a time—that is to say, a generation or two ago—he was very highly esteemed. To him books were dedicated with long rambling prefaces and with episodes which were their own excuse for being. In the very middle of the story the writer would stop with a word of apology or explanation addressed to the gentle reader or at the very least with a nod or a wink no matter if the fate of the hero be in suspense or the plot be inextricably involved.

"Hang the plot!" says the author. "I must have a chat with the gentle reader and find out what he thinks about it."

And so confidences were interchanged, and there was gossip about the universe and suggestions in regard to the queerness of human nature until at last the author would jump up with: "Enough of this, gentle reader; perhaps it's time to go back to the story."

Miss Kingsley and the Gorillas.

On the Gabun river Miss Mary Kingsley's guide one day called to her to creep quietly through the bushes and then she saw a family of five gorillas—an old male, three females and a young one. The guide sneezed, which alarmed the gorillas, and they fled with a bark and a howl, the old male swinging from bough to bough like an acrobat on a trapeze.

On another day Miss Kingsley and her two guides came suddenly upon a solitary male gorilla, who, as usual, had appropriated a forest glade as a park for his private enjoyment. Furious at the intrusion, the brute, instead of fleeing, came shambling toward them, growling fiercely. "Shoot him," whispered Miss Kingsley. "I dare not," said the guide, "until he comes quite close. I have only one gun. The other is out of order. If I miss, he will kill us."

The gorilla came nearer. Rearing himself on his hind legs he beat his breast and roared, just as Du Chailu described long ago. Then, running forward, he stopped and reared again and again ran forward until quite close. Then the guide fired and the gorilla dropped dead.—Chambers' Journal.

Interested.

Mrs. Newrich—I never can remember how many cards to leave when calling. Old Gentleman—The rules are very simple, madam. You hand one to the servant and then on departing leave as many on the plate as there are adult members of the family, adding two of your husband's cards and occasionally dumping in a few more for good measure. Do not be niggardly in dealing out cards, as that suggests vulgar poverty.

"No, madam. I am Mr. Bristol, the card manufacturer."—Exchange.

Which is not to be compared with any similar event in our history. A sale which is to begin a new era for the Erlanger store. Not an effort to get cost out of balance of stock, as is usual with us twice a year, but an actual slaughter, regardless of original cost, with an object in view which will be made more clear later. Slaughter is a word we rarely use, but no other will fill the bill in this instance. But why give excuses for giving two or three dollars worth of merchandise for a dollar? The truthful, the interesting story of the store is best understood by reading the following list, which is but one chapter of many equally sensational.

MEN'S OVERCOATS.

SALE

To-

Which is not to be compared with any similar event in our history. A sale which is to begin a new era for the Erlanger store. Not an effort to get cost out of balance of stock, as is usual with us twice a year, but an actual slaughter, regardless of original cost, with an object in view which will be made more clear later. Slaughter is a word we rarely use, but no other will fill the bill in this instance. But why give excuses for giving two or three dollars worth of merchandise for a dollar? The truthful, the interesting story of the store is best understood by reading the following list, which is but one chapter of many equally sensational.

MEN'S OVERCOATS.

THE EVENING NEWS REVIEW.

16TH YEAR. NO. 175.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., FRIDAY, JANUARY 4, 1901.

TWO CENTS

WILL IT BE A THIRD BRIDGE

Parties Who Should Be Posted As
sert That This Will Be an Accomplished Fact

ERE MANY MOONS PASS BY

And That a Street Car Line Will
Virginia Side

AND CROSS OVER AT WELLSVILLE

There seems to be an epidemic of
bridge building on tip at this special
point at this special time. Perhaps
the proviso should be embraced by
using the expression "an epidemic of
contemplated bridge building."

And now we have the statement that
two new bridges are in sight, in the
minds' eye of the projectors, prominent capitalists and well known hustlers of this section.

One bridge, it is said will cross over
to Chester at a point somewhere in the East End, while another will span the Ohio at Wellsville, and one of the two bridges at East Liverpool will be made use of for the crossing of a street car line which will pass on down the Ohio river on the West Virginia side and come back in the Buckeye state again at Wellsville.

Our informant asserts that these are not merely visionary schemes, but actually projected ventures, sure to materialize at no distant date, and sure to be remunerative investments.

Our informant further states that
heavy transactions in real estate have
lately occurred here, the purchasers
securing the valuable property spoken
of under the idea of heavy advancement in values in consequence of the
projected improvements.

The News Review give these statements for what they are worth. If the reports are given out by certain individuals for the purpose of aiding
themselves in certain pecuniary transactions, the News Review is innocent
in the little game of bluff as this paper does not receive a single penny
from any man or body of men for giving publicity to the reports through these columns. On the contrary, if indisputable proof can be furnished us
that our informants are working their
nice little scheme at our expense, we
will take especial pleasure in unmask-
ing the schemes and posting the public as to the real condition of affairs.
But the bridge story of yesterday had
the earmarks of mean business, as
papers of incorporation have been
taken out, and the standing of the men who are behind the project should
be proof that they mean to erect the bridge contemplated. Further, this paper had the sacred word of honor
of a man who should be fully posted
that the projected affair means business from base.

One thing stands out in bold relief
all the way through this season of
rumors, and that is that East Liverpool is destined to come to the front
with rapid strides during the next four years. Get your thinking cap on, and
open your eyes of observation, and
tute business men and capitalists are
buying up real estate on every hand
in this city, and paying good prices for
the same.

AFTERNOON TRAIN

PLAYS HAVOC WITH THE STREET

Cars Are Responsible for the Delays.

Much complaint is heard on the part
of street car men because of the delay caused by the afternoon train
due in the city at 3:50.

For the past three weeks the train
has been made up with an extra passenger and baggage car attached to
the rear of the train for river traffic and the track has been blocked
several minutes each day ever since
the change went into effect.

The schedule of the street railway
was knocked out two minutes yesterday afternoon.

Terrible Accident Which Occurred
Near Wellsville at an Early Hour This Morning.

JOHN YATES AND HIS SON

Were Asleep in a Cabin and Only
Their Charred Remains
Were Found.

ONE 25-POUND CAN OF POWDER

John Yates, aged 45 years, and his son, George Yates, aged 18, were burned to death this morning at 4 o'clock
at a point on McQueen's Run about
two miles from Wellsville.

The men came from Yellow Creek
two or three days ago and were engaged by Alex Risher to work in his coal bank on the McGaw farm. They took up their residence in the cabin
on McQueen's run. This morning
when the blaze was discovered it was
not known whether they had escaped,
but a search of the ruins this morning
revealed their charred remains.

How the fire started is a mystery,
but there was a hole in the front of
the stove, and it is thought a live coal
probably fell through and caused the
conflagration.

A 25-pound keg of powder had been placed in the cabin yesterday, but is thought the men were dead before it
exploded.

Yates leaves a wife and three daughters at Hanlon station, Pa. The
couple separated about 10 months ago.

Frank Applegate, the 18-year-old son
of Benton Applegate, of Jackson street,
left yesterday afternoon for Pittsburg,
where he today enlisted in the United States navy.

Young Applegate has had a desire
for this sort of a career for several years and lately determined to try his
luck.

He will be transferred to a training
vessel at Brooklyn within the next few
days.

GAS EXPLODED AT ZADOC FOWLER'S

Avondale Street House Was Badly
Wrecked at an Early Hour
Last Evening.

One Side of the Kitchen Was Blown Out but Luckily
Mrs. Fowler

ESCAPED ANY SERIOUS INJURY

A gas explosion occurred at the residence of Zadoc P. Fowler, 162 Minerva
street, at 5:15 o'clock last evening
that came near resulting in the death
of Mrs. Fowler.

The explosion occurred in a basement kitchen which was used by the
family for cooking purposes, and
where the gas came from is as much
a mystery as in the case of the explosion which demolished the residence of Thomas Mays, Calcutta road,

some months ago, since the family
did not use gas in any part of the house.

Mr. Fowler had gone to the basement for the purpose of making preparations for supper and had arranged
the fire for kindling, but when the
match was lighted the explosion, or
more properly speaking, explosions,
for there were three, in rapid suc-
cession occurred.

Mrs. Fowler was badly burned about
the face and hands, and it will be
some time before she is able to be about.

The plaster was knocked from almost every room in the house and
the side of the kitchen fronting on Avondale street was blown out.

Mr. Fowler had not yet returned
from work, and some of the neighbors
summoned the fire department, who,
in addition to making a remarkably
quick run, rendered valuable assistance toward cleaning away the debris.

Mr. Fowler has not yet fixed the probable extent of his loss, but it will
be considerable.

Found Dead in Bed.

Jonathan Hassen, of this city, was
found dead in his bed at the Massillon state hospital this morning. He was
be brought here for interment.

And These Young Folks Had an Exceedingly Pleasant
Time.

There was a very pleasant time last
night at the home residence of Mrs.
Foutts, Fifth street, given in honor of
a young lady friend and visitor of the
hostess. Innocent games and pastimes held sway, and those who participated in the enjoyment report an occasion of unalloyed delight. Miss Foutts and Miss Sterling, as a part of
the evening's entertainment, entertained "the class in art."

John Carlson and Alfred Peterson
Can't Agree on Division of the Stock.

THEY WANT THE COURT

To Enter a Decree Dissolving the Partnership and Appoint a Receiver.

Lisbon, Jan. 4.—(Special.)—John
Carlson and Alfred Peterson are parties to an action filed in court from East Liverpool. The parties formed
a partnership last August for the purpose of dealing in boots and shoes and
engraving copper plates for use in the potteries. About $2,500 was invested
in stock and now it is evident that the
business is unprofitable and is in immediate danger of insolvency. Neither
party wants to continue longer in
business, but cannot agree on a division of the stock.

They want the court to enter a decree dissolving the partnership and
appoint a receiver to take charge of the stock.

Helen W. Blocksom, of this city, has entered suit in common pleas court
asking that she be given a divorce
from William A. Blocksom and also the custody of her minor son. They were married in New Cumberland on June 10, 1894. Wilful absence is alleged as grounds for action.

The will in the estate of the late
Amanda McKee, of Salem, was probat-
ed today and Mary Cotten was appointed executor without bond.

E. G. McGaffick was appointed guardian of Zida Pearl Blery, of Knox township, in the place of H. C. Borton, who is dead. He gave bond in the sum of $1,600.

John Wooster, administrator of the estate of the late Catherine Trythall,
of Wellsville, will sell a tract of land
fronting on the C. & P. railroad track
at Wellsville.

On February 9, Charles M. Shaffer,
guardian of Benj. H. Adams, of Elkton,
will appear in court and show cause
why he should not be removed from
the guardianship.

—Miss Bessie Cartwright returned
to her home in Elwood City, Pa., today after a visit with Miss Verna Day
of Third street.

KEY BOXES WILL BE PROVIDED

If You Want to Sent In a Fire
Alarm You Won't

TO HUNT FOR A KEY

And Let the House Burn Down
Department.

AN UNUSUALLY GOOD MOVE

Several members of the fire department, under the direction of Chief Morley, are just now engaged in placing key boxes at the principal fire
alarm boxes in the city.

For some time past a great deal
of difficulty has been experienced in
finding keys on the occasion of a
fire, as it has been customary to leave
the keys in business places at a point
near the boxes.

Under the new system it will be no
trouble whatever for a total stranger
to locate the keys and turn in an alarm.

Besides a saving of time the plan
is a great convenience.

(By Mary C. Francis, in The Christian Herald.)

CHAPTER III.

"Hold on, Jim. Don't make a fool of yourself. Who put up the stuff to buy the boys in the factory? Who fixed the section gang? Who's worked night and day, tooth and nail, to get this election fixed so that we can't lose?"

"Keep a civil tongue in your head," said Joe, surlily. "I answer fool questions for no man, and you know it."

"Then it's true," cried the enraged man. "Do you hear that boys! Sold out his vote to a Soda-water Bottle; he's tied to the apron strings of his precious —"

With a cry like that of an infuriated animal, Joe Travers sprang over the bar and seized his taunter by the throat. In the midst of the confused uproar he reached the entrance with his helpless prisoner, and pushing the doors wide open with a kick he flung the man out into the street as though he were a feather. As he did so the sudden fury of the crowd culminated, and a shot rang out. A puff of smoke passed before his eyes, and in the instant's daze of his sight a woman fell heavily at his feet in the doorway. Bending down through the faint mist of the blur, he looked into her face. Lying there, a tiny stream of blood trickling out of the bosom of her gown, the rain falling on her still, white features, lay—his mother.

He staggered for an instant; then he caught her up in his strong arms like a man demented, crying out: "Mother! mother! mother!" madly.

The crowd scattered like chaff before the wind.

"Bring her in here," said the voice of the kindly German woman next door, the first words of reason that any one thought to utter.

As she lay like marble, majestic in her white silence, a low murmur greeted the arrival of one who cried in suppressed tones of excitement: "Where is she?" and then Joe Travers, raising his wild eyes, saw standing by him his father.

"Father! father!" he cried. Oh, look at her! Oh, this is my work! No, don't look at me like that. I didn't do it. I don't know who did; but I'm to blame. Oh, can you forgive me? Can you forgive me?"

The face of the elder Travers was filled with an incredulous anguish as he looked at his wife, but as his eyes rested on his son, shaking in that palsy of repentance. He said brokenly: "I forgive you, but God only knows how I can bear this. I cannot give her up."

The two men threw themselves sobbing into each other's arms and as they passionately uttered words of endearment to that voiceless figure, her eyes opened, looked surprisedly into the faces bent above her, and then, half inarticulately, came the words: "What—is—it? Joe—father—I—glad to—see you."

What followed within the next moment or two was indescribably pathetic. She did not seem to realize that anything had happened to her; she only knew that these two, long estranged, and so dear to her, were there together. She smiled and placed their hands together, saying only, "How nice of you to come home, Joe."

"Will it take an eternity for any one to get there?" cried the husband. At this instant an authoritative figure pushed his way through the crowd and said brusquely: "This room must be cleared at once. All of you will leave except those whom I say stay."

Silently waiting, in what tense feeling may not be told in words, Joe Travers and his father sat together in the little kitchen. Presently the door opened and the doctor came out. "She will live," he said; "it is not even dangerous. The ball passed out through her shoulder. It is only a flesh wound. She wishes to see you."

Half staggering in his reaction from agony to joy, Joe followed his father into the room. There he broke down once more, and, throwing himself on his knees by her, burst into tears.

"Never mind, my boy," said the mother, "I'm not hurt at all. The doctor says it's not much more than what a man shot in battle would call a scratch, and I was shot in battle; so, I'll call it a scratch, too. It's all right, just so you and father have made up, and you'll come home, won't you?"

Joe Travers sprang to his feet with another of those swift changes characteristic of him. "Come home! mother! Yes, I'll come home tonight, and I'll do more—I'll close my saloon forever. I'll do anything in the world if you will forgive me for all I have done."

"I forgive you, my boy—of course I forgive you. Don't you know, I have always loved you. Joe! Joe!—it seems too good to be true! I never was so happy in my life. Kiss me, my boy."

"Be careful, Diana," said Mr. Travers. "You must not excite yourself. Everything is all right now and you must rest. Perhaps you are elected," he suggested, smiling.

"Perhaps I am elected," replied Mrs. Travers, "or perhaps"—she paused and turned her eyes on Joe. Who was elected? Who, indeed?

His father drew out his watch and looked at it.

"It is half-past five," he said. "One of you has been elected mayor of Belle Centre."

Then Joe Travers spoke:

"Mother, I had not voted yet awhile ago when—that that happened, but I'm going to now. I'm going down to the polls to vote for you, and I only wish that my vote alone could elect you. It won't, but I'll do the best I can. If you're elected I'll work with you, and if I'm elected"—he paused—"I'll close the Blue Tiger forever and atone for this night's work if I can."

He raised himself, and stopping only to say, "I'll be back soon," he rushed out of the house. Running swiftly toward the square, he saw as he passed the open road leading southward out of town a dark moving line approaching the village. Full well he knew what the dark line was—it was the men of the section gang, laborers on the railroad, who were compelled to go to their work before the polls opened, and now they had knocked off work half an hour earlier than usual and were on their way to cast a solid vote for him. Had he not "fixed" them?

His swiftly running feet had not taken three steps more before he turned sharply at right angles southward on the open road and ran faster than before to the railroad crossing, and thence down the track.

As he ran a powerful voice in the moving line advancing through the rain sung out the first line of "John Brown's Body." The refrain was instantly caught up by the steadily tramping men, forty odd, and thus they approached each other, the hat-

less, flying man in the dark, marching line, marked by the rhythm of the song: "Glory, glory, hallelujah! As we go marching on!"

"Listen to me. Less than an hour ago my mother was shot on the steps of my saloon while I was throwing out a coward who would have insulted her. She's not much hurt, but it might have killed her, and that's enough for me. Boys, you know me. I'm done now. I've quit—quit the business forever, and I want you to help me. I hadn't voted yet, but now I'm going to vote for my mother. I don't want your votes—they're no good to me now. What I want to ask you is this: Will any of you go to the polls with me and vote for my mother?"

From out of the astonished silence of the crowd there arose a hoarse, indeterminate murmur. Then out stepped a man from the rest.

"Your mother's a lady and a Christian, Joe, and I'll vote for her for one. I'm with you, Joe."

"And so am I!"

"Turncoat!" shouted an angry voice.

"Turncoat or no turncoat," cried Joe Travers, fiercely, "I'll stand up for my mother. Is there any one of you so lost to decency that he can see a woman, and that woman his own mother, shot down in cold blood and not resent it! Answer me, have any of the rest of you got mothers?"

He who had cried "turncoat" slunk away, grumbling, and was followed by two or three growling profanely in their throats of "treachery" and "babyism."

"Go ahead, Joe, we're ready," sung out the foreman.

"Then come on, quick; there's no time to lose. Start that song again and let 'em know we're coming."

"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave —"

They tramped in a double-quick step up the track—

"As we go marching on—"

They reached the crossing and turned into the road—"Glory, glory, hallelujah—"

They gained the edge of the town, and were recruited by dozens—"John Brown's body lies a-mouldering in the grave—"

Surrounded by the cheering populace, they swept on to the square. In front, Joe Travers, hatless, striding determinedly—

"As we go marching on—"

They drew up at the polling place. As Joe Travers walked into the polling booth of the "drys" a mighty shout went up, and, amid wild cheering, the forty odd votes were quickly deposited. As the last man turned away, the clock struck 6 and the polls closed.

Three hours later Mrs. Travers, resting comfortably, lay on a lounge in her own home, surrounded by her family and friends, including all of her associates on the ticket of the "drys."

Up the street floated the sound of martial strains and the tramping of many feet. Nearer it came, and nearer

—paused in front of the lawn—and there was loud shouting: "Three cheers for the mayor!"

"It's you, mother; I know it is," said Joe.

Pale and weak, she gathered herself up, and cried in resonant tones: "I thank you, my friends. God bless you all. You must excuse me now."

She turned toward Joe. Another impulse struck the jubilant crowd.

"What's the matter with Joe Travers?"

And the torches flickered with the vibrations of the stentorian reply: "He's—all—right."

As the procession, still cheering on general principles, passed the Blue Tiger, the torches showed distinctly a sign reading: "Closed—Joe Travers." Whereat they cheered again.

As to the mysterious shot, every one knew now that the responsibility could not be definitely fixed, but as three of the toughest characters of the village had secretly boarded the train three miles south of town with the information that they were "skipping the blasted town for good," it was generally understood that if they stayed skipped, the matter would be dropped.

It was one week later that Joe Travers stood on the platform of the largest church in Belle Centre. The mayor sat with the pastors of the churches on the great platform, surrounded by the city council, the clerk and some distinguished invited guests from adjoining towns who were on hand to see "how it worked."

He had just finished his speech. "It was the happiest moment of my life when I cast that vote for my mother, and it is to her, and to the good women of this village, that I owe it all. I thank God for my mother's prayers, for her tears, for her undying determination. And further, good people, I ask all of you to forgive me for the evil I have caused to this town. My father and mother have forgiven me, and I trust that Christ also has pardoned me, for by his help the rest of my life shall be devoted to his service. I have offered all that I have and am to the Lord, and if you will let me help you as well as I can, I will gladly be the humblest worker of you all in the making of our little city a model for others. Not for my sake, but for the sake of these—" he pointed to the women—"I ask you to think of me with as little harshness as you can, and let me show by the rest of my life that I mean what I say."

There could be but one outcome to such forces set in motion. In less than a year Belle Centre was practically another town, so far as the administration of its municipal affairs was concerned. The saloons were closed, despite the reckless threats made at first by the tough element, which did not propose to be downed by the "Mamas." Nor was Belle Centre injured by the fact that several who could not stand the changed order of things, got out, sans ceremony. The street paving and lighting were materially improved, and incidentally the manner in which public funds had been misappropriated came to light; a public park was laid out, the library enlarged and a lecture course provided. When you want to hear these things well told you should hear them—as I did—told by a well-known citizen of Belle Centre, Mr. Joseph Travers, Jr., at what was once the sign of the Blue Tiger, but now the leading restaurant and coffee house of the town.

PETTIGREW OBJECTED

But Senate Voted to Continue
Considering Army Bill.

SUBSIDY BILL BACK TO CALENDAR.

Military Measure Made Unfinished Business—Opposition Senators Indicated Their Line of Attack May Be Against Large, Permanent Standing Army.

Washington, Jan. 4.—When the senate convened in its first session of the twentieth century the army bill was taken up with a view to pressing it to a formal vote as soon as possible. Its consideration proceeded until about 2 o'clock in the afternoon—called the end of the morning hour—when the subsidy bill was laid before the senate. Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, then objected to a request for unanimous consent to continue the discussion of the army bill. By a vote of the senate the military measure was continued for consideration, thus making it the unfinished business and sending the subsidy bill back to the calendar.

During the discussion of the army measure the opposition senators indicated that their line of attack upon the bill would be against the creation of a large, permanent standing army. There was intimation that objection would not be offered to a temporary measure to provide an adequate force to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines. Beyond this point the proceedings developed apparently little of importance.

RADICALS WERE DEFEATED.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The radical element among the house Republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the southern states in which franchise is abridged suffered defeat because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. The issue was precipitated quite unexpectedly. The leaders had decreed that the reapportionment bill should be taken up, but before it could be called Mr. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, offered as a matter of privilege, a resolution reciting the alleged abridgement of the suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and North Carolina and directing the committee on census to investigate and report the facts to the house in order that a constitutional basis of representation could be established for those states. The resolution created a sensation. It was a surprise even to several of the Republican leaders. The leaders on the Democratic side sought in vain to head off the resolution with points of order, but the speaker ruled against them. They then began to filibuster, openly avowing that they would fight every proposition looking to the reduction of representation from the southern states to the bitter end. Several of the Republicans were secretly in sympathy with them, and their indifference to the fate of the Olmsted resolution the victory. Many of them quietly paired with absent Democrats, leaving their absent colleagues unpaired. As a result, when the question of consideration was raised against the resolution, it was defeated, 81 to 83. The vote was a strict party one. Two Republicans, Landis, of Indiana, and Mann, of Illinois, answered present, but did not vote. The story of the defeat is found in the absentees on both sides who were unpaired. Thirty-two Republicans were absent and unpaired, against 16 of the opposition. Those absent and unpaired were:

Republicans—Boutelle, Maine; Brosius, Brown, Burkett, Dick, Calderhead, Clarke, New Hampshire; Dahle, Samuel, Davenport, Dick, Fowler, Gardner (N. J.), Hawley, Hoffecker, Knox, Lorimer, Loudenslager, McCleary, Metcalf, Miller, Mondell, Morgan, Needham, Otjen, Parker, Prince, Russell, Showalter, Smith (Ill.), Sprague, Stevens (Minn.), Wadsworth and Wanger.

Democrats—Barber (Pa.), Bradley (N. Y.), Brewer, Caldwell, Catchings, Gaston, Gayle, Glynn, Levy, May, Meekinson, Shephard, Stallings, Wilson (S. C.) and Zeigler.

Silver Republican—Wilson (Idaho).

The situation with reference to the apportionment bill is greatly complicated as a result of the injection of the Olmsted resolution. Chairman Hopkins, however, was confident of victory for his bill. He thought the

Olmsted resolution might pass in a full house and that the investigation might be made, but that the matter would end there. Irrespective of the fate of the resolution, however, he would press the reapportionment bill and thought it will pass on Monday. If possible he may displace private bill day today with his measure.

HAWLEY AN ALARMIST?

Intimated That We Might Be In Danger of Trouble With Some European Power.

Washington, Jan. 4.—In a speech in the senate on the army bill, Mr. Hawley said, in part, that the necessity for an adequate army was evident to all, and further said in part: "We are not altogether out of sight of some possibility of war with some European power. We do not know. They are in a great deal of trouble there, and I understand they look with very great jealousy upon our talk of a Danish island and our talk about acquiring other territory."

BISHOP NINDE DEAD.

Aged Dignitary of the M. E. Church Found Dead in Bed—Aged 68 Years.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Bishop W. X. Ninde, aged 68 years, of the Methodist Episcopal church, was found dead in his bed at his home here. It is thought the cause of death was heart trouble. He attended a funeral the day before and caught a cold. He had been a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1884, and was known throughout the United States. Prior to his election as a bishop he was pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church here and was at one time a missionary in India.

He left a wife, three sons and one daughter. One son, Edward, is a Methodist minister at Ann Arbor. His daughter Mary was formerly a missionary worker in India. She is now in the south with her brother Fred, who is ill. The other son, George, is also ill at his home here. The day before the presiding elders of Michigan held a conference here and decided to sell the Episcopal residence, now occupied by Bishop Ninde's family, because the churches of Michigan outside of Detroit and other large cities failed to contribute sufficient funds to maintain it.

CONGRESS TAKES A HAND.

Committee Started Investigation of Hazing, Said to Have Caused Booz's Death.

Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—The congressional investigation committee, recently appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the case of Oscar L. Booz, the former West Point cadet, whose relatives believe he came to his death as a result of hazing at the military academy two years ago, assembled at the Lafayette hotel in this city last night. The committee, which consists of Charles Dick, Ohio, chairman; Edmund H. Driggs, New York; Irving P. Wanger, Pennsylvania; Walter I. Smith, Iowa, and Bertram T. Clayton, New York, held an executive session, at which the preliminary arrangements for the taking of testimony was made. The committee was to leave here this morning for Bristol, the home of the Booz family, and will immediately begin the taking of testimony. After hearing the Bristol witnesses the committee was to return to this city to hear Philadelphia physicians who were connected with the case, after which the investigators will sit at West Point. Night sessions will probably be held in order to expedite the inquiry. A copy of the testimony taken by the military board of inquiry has been sent to the congressional committee for reference.

It is announced that the case of former Cadet John Breth will be taken up, and telegrams have been sent to the young man's father and the family physician at Altoona, summoning them to Philadelphia. Messages were also sent to a young man named Burnham, who, while a cadet at West Point, lived in the same tent with Booz. Burnham resides in Richmond, Ky.

Investigation Into Fire Horror.

Fredonia, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Testimony of students in the inquest into the cause of deaths in the recent state normal and training school fire showed lack of fire drills and instruction relative to the use of the fire escapes. Principal Francis Palmer stated that in his opinion had Janitor Morris, who perished, used the fire extinguisher tube he could have extinguished the blaze before it gained headway.

DIED OF ILL TREATMENT?

Superintendent at Annapolis Called Upon Regarding Charge as to a Marine's Death.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The navy department has called upon the superintendent of the naval academy for a report upon a charge submitted by Representative Rixey, of Virginia, to the effect that a marine named Hobart Green, of Virginia, had died at Annapolis from ill treatment while sick. It was alleged that Green was obliged to march while ill from pneumonia and that the ecks were washed beneath him while he lay in his hammock on the Santee.

The medical record shows that Green died from pneumonia. His father is a special pension examiner credited to Sandusky, O.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, JANUARY 4, 1901.

$100,000 MEN.

A daily journal in this neck of woods solemnly announces that Uncle Sam will enlist $100,000 men for the Philippine service. "That's a dandy nice bounty," said a genial and handsome salesman in one of our clothing establishments, "and I guess I'll hunt up a recruiting officer. One hundred thousand dollars in bright yellow gold will repay me well for three years' duty in the Philippines."

DENS OF VICE.

Reform, in genuine earnest, is the order of the day and night in Chicago and New York city. The citizen's committee mean Reform with a big "R," thank God, and the gamblers and thugs, and illegal liquor sellers, and keepers of dives and brothels have just cause for uneasiness and alarm, as their protectors and patron saints and guardians, the policemen, sworn to enforce the laws and ordinances, and breaking their solemn oath as if perjury were a pleasant pastime, are no longer able to protect them from the righteous vengeance of an outraged public, composed of clean and decent citizens. God grant that this much needed reform may sweep all over the cities mentioned, and all over the nation, and that the process may catch some unhung and unpunished rascals in this city of East Liverpool.

PULL THEIR FANGS.

When you catch a snake, slimy, slippery, forbidding, forked and crooked of tongue, a foul and poisonous thing, at a disadvantage, don't hesitate a moment, but pull its fangs, for fear that it may, at some future time, try to sting some of your friends. Respectfully referred to the fellows who have been bleeding the politicians of Columbiana county, under the pretense of possessing a strong political following, when the identical boasters could not be elected to the berth of sexton of a country graveyard or the janitor of a village calaboose. These same snaky customers have been fed for years by a generous hand, and the slimy creatures show their gratitude by striking at the hand which fed them. You can name these serpents, as their actions have discovered their hiding places and the modus operandi of their work. Beware of them. In their dying moments they may spit forth venom. Pull their fangs.

THE PUBLIC DANCE.

And some mothers in this city, backed by some fathers, one and all of them no doubt loving their daughters, can find no special harm in, and will even make excuses for the public dance. God pity and have mercy upon all such fond and foolish parents and heads of families. Let the writer illustrate the awful danger. Not long since there was a dance at a public resort in this city. There was present a charming young lady resident, a member of one of our respectable families. She had been indulging in a waltz with a respectable young man, and was accosted a moment later by a saloon keeper, the proprietor of one of the most notorious and vilest dens in this city, who requested the favor of her company in the dance, and she, fearful of offending some of his friends by a refusal, was a moment later encircled in the fellow's arms and gliding over the waxed floor. The association was simply an infamy against any pure and good and virtuous girl, and her father and mother should have dreaded the contact with such a creature, on the part of their much loved daughter, as they would that of a leper, a viper or a ravenous wild beast, thirsting for human gore. In the name of everything sacred, fathers and mothers of East Liverpool, keep your pure and virtuous daughters away from the public dances, as such resorts are side partners and go hand in glove with the saloon and the brothel. This is plain talk; but it is the unvarnished truth, and the sooner you face the fact, the better it will be for yourself and your household.

UNION FROM PRINCIPLE.

The News Review office is a strictly union office, all the way through, from front to rear, from top to bottom, from center to circumference. This paper is a union paper on the standpoint of principle, believing that true unionists are the best men that an employer can employ. What we mean by true unionists is that class of men who always give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. A loafer and a bum and a drunkard and a gambler and a debauchee and a dishonest man cannot, in the nature of things, be a true unionist. The owner and manager of this paper has always been a true unionist, from the standpoint of principle. He has never been a rat, under any circumstances, from the time he first joined Typographical union No. 7, of Pittsburg, Pa., when he first went to work on the Pittsburg Evening Chronicle, Fifth avenue, after serving for four years in the ranks in the great war of the Rebellion, and he never will become a rat, under any circumstances. Can his petty, unscrupulous and dirty enemies say the same? Conscious of the truth of our assertions, we fling defiance in the face of our sneaking, cowardly, contemptible and underhand enemies. This office is a union office all the way through, despite the assertion of a man who calls himself a pressman to the contrary, he having been so foolish and verdant as to place himself on record as making untrue and false accusations against this office and its union manager and union employees, and we have solid proof of the uttering and mouthings of his lying tongue. We have uncovered and exposed ward bummers and so-called political heelers, and taken away from them their income, gained from worse than highway robbery, and they have taken this lying, underhanded and cowardly way of getting even. Let them have a care. Forbearance may cease to be a virtue in their cases, and we may be compelled to give the names of the ungrateful scoundrels. This is but the opening of the warfare. We bide our time. COUNCILMEN ACCUSED.

More Arrests on Bribery Charges, at Scranton, Pa. Others May Be Rearrested.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three more arrests of councilmen were made at the instance of the Municipal league on charges of bribery. Select Councilmen Thomas O'Boyle, of the Eighteenth ward; John J. McAndrew, of the Twenty-first ward, and Edward J. Coleman, of the Sixteenth ward. At a hearing Thursday they were examined generally on their participation in the passage of the Lackawanna telephone ordinance and the electric light ordinance. A number of the witnesses were councilmen who had been previously arrested, but who escaped prosecution by the compromise agreement.

At that time two of them, Messrs. Williams and McCann, agreed to tell the whole truth concerning city hall, but at a hearing Wednesday they answered every question in the negative. They will be re-arrested, so it was asserted, on the charge which they escaped, and will also be prosecuted for perjury. One of the stories to be brought out is concerning a councilman combine, by which the members were to receive $75 per month during their term for influencing legislation.

W. H. MONTGOMERY LOST HIS PLACE

Interesting Story In Regard
to Telephone Affairs.

Was Ordered Taken Out by Attorney Walton, but Order
Was Not Obeyed.

THIS IS WHAT CAUSED TROUBLE

A story in regard to the retirement
of W. H. Montgomery from the employ of the Columbiana County Telephone company was printed last evening in the Wellsville Record. It is exceedingly interesting and is as follows:

The stand which W. H. Montgomery
took in reference to the telephone in
the disorderly house of Lester Laugh-
lin in this city was one of the things which cost him his job with the Independent Telephone company.

Mr. Montgomery was the superintendent of the company at East Liverpool. When the public discovered that Laughlin had a telephone in his house
there was a howl. In Cleveland there
is an ordinance which prohibits disorderly houses from having a telephone.

Attorney Walton, of the telephone company, happened to visit this
city when the Laughlin telephone matter was up, and he gave an order immediately for the removal of the telephone from Laughlin's house. He gave
the order to Harry Kelly, the company's electrician. Laughlin appealed to Montgomery, who ordered that the telephone be left in the house. Kelly refused to take it out, claiming that he recognized Montgomery as his superior
officer.

About a week ago the company discharged both Montgomery and Kelly.
Mr. Kelly, however, has been reinstated and is now at work for the company. Montgomery's successor is
B. Coplin, of Findlay.

It is said the company would have discharged Kelly long ago but had an attempt to thaw it. Captain
wait until they could get a competent man to fill his place. The Laugh-
lin telephone matter, it is said, was one of the things the company has
up against him.

It will be news to the public that
there is no telephone in Laughlin's
house now. It was taken out about a week ago. Laughlin surrendered his telephone on his own motion, though
an official of the company states that
the telephone would have been taken out if Laughlin did not surrender.

The Independent company now has a new general manager in this county. He is W. H. Crosley, and his headquarters are at Salem. William Hayden, formerly of Youngstown, has been appointed electrician of the company
with headquarters at East Liverpool.

EAST END.

THE F. F. F. F.

Were Very Pleasantly Entertained
Last Evening by Mrs. Mary Warner.

Mrs. Mary Warner very pleasantly entertained the members of the Four F's and their gentlemen friends at her home on Ohio avenue last evening.

The entertainment was in the shape
of a Mother Goose rhyme guessing contest, and was as enjoyable as it was
novel.

Miss Bessie Hanley and Wm. Hus-
tin were found to be a tie for the lucky prize, and lots being cast the sole honor or dishonor fell to Mr.
Hustin.

The first prize was won by Miss Bowler and Dick Chambers, but owing to the fact that the Mother Goose
rhymes had not yet been issued when it was a boy, and especially because
made such an able effort as a composer of other verses, the prize was inherited to Prof. Laughlin.

Refreshments were served and the
action will go down in the history
of the society as one of the most pleasant since its organization.

Two Young Girls' Complaint of Treatment Received at the Hands
of Their Parents.

There is trouble in the Robinson
family on Dixon's hill.

Complaint has been made by two
daughters that they are receiving very
bad treatment at the hands of their parents, and it is likely steps will be taken to find homes for them elsewhere.

A few days ago 16-year-old Mary Robinson was found sitting on the
steps of a Mulberry street residence,
and upon being questioned by the people residing therein, stated she was dreaded to go home. She was half clad
and presented a pitiable spectacle.

Bursting Water Pipe Caused Some Trouble at an East End
Residence.

A bursting water pipe in the house
of Joseph Mills, occupied by Mrs.
House, St. George street, caused a great deal of trouble this morning.

The pipe had frozen and was bursting. Captain
wait until they could get a competent man to fill his place. The Laugh-
lin telephone matter, it is said, was
one of the things the company has
up against him.

Returned to Mansfield.

Mrs. H. E. Hall, who has been visiting her parents in East End, has returned to her home in Mansfield. She expects to spend a few days in Se-
bring.

Funeral Services.

The funeral of the three-months-
old child of Mr. and Mrs. William Helm will take place at 2 o'clock
tomorrow afternoon from the home of Mrs. Hamilton, East End.

A Candidate.

L. W. Carman will be a candidate

SOUTH SIDE.

HE WAS FINED.

John Durff Was Assessed $20 And Costs for Running a Slot
Machine.

John Durff was arraigned yesterday
in the court of Justice Johnson on a charge of running a slot machine.

Durff pleaded guilty and a fine of $20 and costs was imposed. The fine
and costs amounted to something over

The statement that the charge was
made by Retiring Constable Allison
was incorrect, as Justice Johnson
made the statement yesterday that he
was entirely responsible for the
charge. He said, however, that he would be lenient on this occasion and
would impose the minimum fine in
such cases.

There is thought to be something
behind the whole affair that will develop within the next few days, and
when it does some surprises are in store for a number of the residents
of that community.

The Hancock County Building And Loan Association Met Yesterday.

The annual meeting of the Hancock County Building & Loan company was held in Justice Johnson's office yesterday.

The following directors were elected

ployed for the Chester mill and will finish up at Irondale next Wednesday.

They also say that one other Iron-
dale mill worker has been engaged to work at the Chester mill.

Attending Revival Services.

A number of Chester people went to Asbury church last night for the purpose of attending the protracted meeting being conducted at that place.

The meetings are in charge of Rev.

preaches at Asbury and Bethel in addition to the Cumberland church, and
a very successful series of services are being held.

Southside Personals.

P. L. Allison and wife left today for
New Cumberland, where they will
spend a week visiting relatives.

The condition of A. S. Allison, of
near Asbury chapel, is not improved,
and fears are entertained that he may
not recover.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Jackson returned to Chester last night after a visit with friends in the county.

Citizens Were Organizing at Cape Town.

Were Getting Ready to Meet Contingencies—Farmers From Carnarvon Described Boers as Traveling and Seizing Horses and Estates.

Cape Town, Jan. 4.—The military authorities were preparing for all contingencies. It was decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

Farmers coming in to Carnarvon described the Boers as traveling in parallel columns, with numerous flanking parties sweeping the country of horses, plundering loyalists and carrying off estates. It appeared that they were accompanied by strings of pack horses lightly loaded.

A message from Colesberg stated that Kritzinger's commando was crossing the Middleburg district, but was getting few if any recruits.

Here in Cape Town such business men as were unable to leave were organizing a town guard composed of the leading citizens. The commercial companies asked the mayor to call a mass meeting to urge the government to suppress disloyal newspapers and to proclaim martial law.

London, Jan. 4.—Advices from Cape Town this morning were more hopeful, owing to the active recruiting of local forces in all quarters, and a better feeling prevailed in London, based upon the prospect of Lord Roberts taking the reins at the war office.

From Sydney, N. S. W., it was reported that there was quite a rush of men there anxious to join the new contingents, about 5,000 having volunteered. The reports of Lord Kitchener's conference with Burghers also tended to remove anxiety.

According to The Daily Express, Lord Kitchener had warned the mine owners that they must not count upon military protection.

London, Jan. 4.—The censorship permitted news of peace tentatives to emanate from Pretoria, containing the following in part:

About the middle of December a number of prominent Burghers who had submitted and were living in the Pretoria district formed a peace committee. Mr. Van Rensburg, a former member of the first volksraad of the Transvaal, was elected president of the committee, which included other prominent former members of the volksraad. The committee resolved to attempt negotiations, and accordingly, in response to a suggestion, Lord Kitchener attended a meeting of the committee Dec. 21 and addressed the meeting. His speech contained the following in part:

He proceeded to point out the folly of the continuance of guerilla warfare, since the British government would never permit the re-establishment of the Boer government.

Mr. Chamberlain's statements in parliament, Lord Kitchener contended, clearly showed that there was no wish to oppress the Burghers. On the contrary, the British proposals foreshadowed an enlightened government, in which the Burghers would have a prominent share, insuring the rights of property and the ancient laws and customs of the Burghers.

Lord Kitchener urged that it was useless to continue the present inhuman struggle, pointing out that the powers had refused Mr. Kruger's requests for intervention. The Burghers, he said, had fought a good fight, but they had been overpowered, and there was no dishonor in the leaders recognizing that fact. He reminded them that there were hosts of Boer prisoners waiting to be restored to their families.

Referring to his proclamations to the country, Lord Kitchener said that unfortunately these had not been allowed to reach the Burghers and he trusted that the committee would make known the facts to the Boers in the field, as he desired to give them every chance to surrender and wished to finish the war by the most humane means possible. He promised to give the committee notice if compelled to abandon the conciliatory for harsher measures. Going on to explain his recent proclamations, confirming the statement that those who had broken oaths of neutrality would be treated in the same way as the others, he told the committee that all would be accommodated with their families, in protected laagers along the line of railway. He asserted that it was imperative to clear the country of inhabitants and of food, because so long as food remained the commandoes would be able to continue in the field. He could not be responsible for stock unless it was brought in, adding that he hoped at the end of the war to be able to divide the remaining stock among the various sufferers.

No one, he promised, would be sent out of the country, but all who had fought fairly, including the leaders, would receive the consideration due their rank.

The committee, which included General Cronje's brother, cordially thanked Lord Kitchener and promised to print the speech in Dutch and to circulate it everywhere.

Since the meeting orders have been issued against the burning of farm houses, unless it should be proved that the actual inhabitants had committed misdeeds.

The first districts cleared under Lord Kitchener's plan were Jagersfontein and Fauresmith, whose inhabitants were laagered at Fauresmith.

Storm of Liquidation in Stock Market. Number of Prices Were Going Downward, Thursday.

New York, Jan. 4.—The long-expected storm of liquidation broke over the stock market Thursday and swept prices in a torrent of selling on a downward course, which was not effectually checked even at the close of the market. The wiping out of margin with the decrease in the face of value of stocks forced them to sale to prevent losses by the brokers. Whether any of the liquidation beyond this was forced would be difficult to say.

The money market maintained a calm surface, the call loan rate ruling at 5 1/2 per cent or below that. There was a continued shifting of loans, however, incident to the enormous financial transactions involved in the yearly settlement and the disturbance of loans thus caused added to the unsettled feeling in the stock market. The aggregate sum called for by the checks passed through the clearing house banks Thursday reached $380,132,005, which, with the single exception of Wednesday, was the largest total on record, exceeding the previous maximum by over $15,000,000.

There were various contributory causes assigned to account for the violent break, but all of them together would have proved ineffectual to induce selling in the speculative mood which has prevailed in Wall street for many weeks past. The real root of the trouble was that faith in the level of prices began to be impaired and a conviction was borne in upon speculators that the large demand for stocks which they have expected to continue during January has been pretty largely discounted.

The extreme decline in Rubber was 7 1/4 in Rubber preferred, 9 1/4 in Sugar, 6 1/4, Metropolitan Street Railway, 6 1/4; Federal Steel, 5, and in most of the leading industrial stocks between 2 and 5 points. In the railroad list those stocks which have recently been under most palpable manipulation were naturally most effected. The most notable decline from the high point were Erie first preferred, 4 1/4; Delaware and Hudson, 4; Northern Pacific, 3 1/4; Baltimore and Ohio and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 3 1/4; Iowa Central preferred, 3 1/4; Pennsylvania, Reading second preferred, Denver and Rio Grande preferred and Chicago and Great Western preferred "B," 3 1/4; Kansas and Texas preferred, 3 1/4; Union Pacific, 3 1/4, and throughout the railroad list from 1 to 3 points. The closing was in many cases near the lowest.

The bond market was very active and liquidation was in force there as well as in stocks, but the declines in prices were by no means so marked. Total sales, par value, $3,955,000. United States refunded 2s declined 1/4 and new 4s regular 1/4 on the last call.

THE WEATHER.

Western Pennsylvania—Fair in southern, probably snow flurries with rising temperature in northern portion today; winds generally southerly, fresh to brisk on the lakes. Tomorrow generally fair.

Ohio—Fair today, except possibly snow flurries along the lake; warmer in northern portion; winds becoming southerly, fresh to brisk along the lake. Tomorrow fair, except possibly snow flurries along the northeastern lake shore.

West Virginia—Fair today; not so cold in eastern portion; southerly winds, becoming westerly. Tomorrow probably fair.

Such a Rumor Printed In Paris Paper.

According to the Rumor an Officer of the Allied Forces Did the Killing. Rumor Also Current in Berlin, but Was Not Confirmed.

Paris, Jan. 4.—Le Journal reported, under reserve, the death of Count von Waldersee, the rumor being that he was killed by an officer of the allied troops, the circumstances not being related.

It was said that the rumor was current in Berlin, where it was not confirmed.

CHINESE MUST SIGN NOTE.

Will Be Notified to Do So Before a Joint Meeting Can Be Held.

Pekin, Jan. 4.—The foreign envoys, with the exception of the British minister, Sir Ernest Satow, met to consider the time and place for the acceptance and signing of the joint note. Nothing definite was decided. It seemed to be the opinion of some of the envoys that the acceptance of the terms of the note by the Chinese was not explicit enough. The Chinese desire for consultations regarding the razing of the forts and the legation guards was open to misinterpretation and liable to lead to long and continuous arguments, which might, in the opinion of some of the ministers, simply mean sparring for time on the part of the Chinese.

Consequently the Chinese plenipotentiaries will be notified that they must sign the note before the meeting between them and the foreign envoys can be held.

Sir Ernest Satow, who had been suffering from chills and fever, was better.

The military engineers of the allies agreed upon a plan for the future defenses of the legations.

Troops Sent to Investigate Reports of Murders and Try to Secure Arrests.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Some officials here were surprised when they saw the press reports stating that the American troops in Peking, which were distinctly designated as legation guards, and as such were to have no part in ordinary military operations, had gone out into the country to co-operate with a German expeditionary force. The following cablegram was received from General Chaffee:

"Adjutant General, Washington. 'Colonel Theodore J. Wint returned. Movement simply to verify report Christians had been murdered and secure arrest guilty parties if allegation found true. Germans from Tien Tsin had been in country. Take no part in offensive operations; patrol country between Peking, Hoshi Wu and Chang Kiawan occasionally for the purpose of order. 'Chaffee.'"

THREE KNOWN TO BE DEAD.

Two Fatal Mine Accidents—Six Others Were Still in One of the Mines.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 4.—Three men entered the Pine Ridge colliery of the Algonquin Coal company at Miners Mills to make some repairs. They did not come to the surface when expected. A number of rescuers went down to investigate. They, too, failed to come back. Then another rescuing party went down.

Last evening they found the dead bodies of D. J. Williams, the foreman, and William Morgan, fire boss. The men were victims of fire damp. There were six other men in the mine and it was believed they perished, too.

The mouth of the mine was surrounded by the relatives of the men entombed and their grief was heart-rending.

An explosion of gas occurred in No. 2 mine of the Delaware and Hudson company at Plymouth. John Redusky, foreman of a gang of laborers, entered an abandoned chamber with a naked lamp and ignited the gas. Redusky was instantly killed. The following were injured: Andrew Rudsky, Joe Eustace, Joseph Lyonsdale, Philip Klein, Martin Duddy and Michael Kelly.

REMME PUT UNDER ARREST.

Cincinnati, Jan. 4.—Edward C. Remme, cashier of the German National bank of Newport, Ky., was arrested by United States Marshal Compton upon a warrant issued at the instance of Bank Examiner Tucker. Owing to the shortage of Frank M. Brown of $195,000 as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, who disappeared, the bank was recently placed in the hands of Tucker as receiver. Bank Examiner Tucker said last night:

"On April 26, 1899, I arranged with Cashier Remme to examine the books of the bank privately. Remme and I were the only one who knew of the arrangement. On April 29 the books were taken to Cincinnati and examined in private. I have since discovered that between April 26 and 29 60 false entries were made, covering a shortage of over $90,000. Some one must have informed Brown that the books were to be examined, so as to give him an opportunity to make the false entries. This is the basis of my affidavit against Remme."

Mr. Remme said: "I am innocent and did not know of the Brown shortage before the directors knew it, and gave Brown no intimation of the secret investigation of the books."

Mr. Remme has been assisting Receiver Tucker in closing up the affairs of the old bank and organizing the new one, and was at work in the bank when arrested. He was released on $25,000 bail, which he was unable to secure until last night.

Petitions had been numerous signed by the old depositors for Remme to be the cashier of the reorganized bank, and his arrest came as a surprise to the community.

OVER $300,000 FOR MISSIONS.

Attacks on a Chapel in Granada, Spain Reported.

Boston, Jan. 4.—The nineteenth annual report of the American board of foreign missions was made public. The donations received during the year aggregated $317,913. The report said in part:

"Never before since the revolution that initiated the new order of things in Spain in the year 1899 has there been such open and violent hatred expressed against not only the gospel, but all liberalizing thought and action. In Granada the mob led by students of the schools and universities two or three different times in the course of one month attacked the Protestant chapel in broad daylight, tearing down the sign that was inside of the public door, stoned the house, breaking windows and making such a noise as to alarm the neighborhood."

McCullough Bondsman and Blair County (Pa.) Commissioners Agree.

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 4.—The McCullough bondsman and the county commissioners arrived at a settlement. The former will pay $25,000 in cash and transfer to the county a lot on Fourteenth avenue, Altoona, and 12 lots in Calverton, valued at $5,000, which were formerly owned by McCullough. In addition the bondsman also gave a bond in the sum of $9,500 to cover any shortage in case the defalcation reaches $40,000. Judge Bell approved the settlement. McCullough was still missing.

Accomplice in Dowleite Riot Indicted.

Manfield, O., Jan. 4.—The jury in the case of Allen Andrews, indicted in connection with the Dowleite riots last fall, returned a verdict of guilty. Andrews resisted the officer who was protecting a Dowleite elder. The others indicted for participation in Dowleite riots will be indicted.

EVENTS IN BRIEF.

The president informed the senate that he deemed it unwise to make public the Lawshe report on Cuban frauds.

An unknown girl, about 20 years old, was instantly killed on Western avenue, near Grant avenue, Allegheny City, Pa., when she attempted to get off a street car.

Over a week ago, Olive, the 10-year-old motherless daughter of Lewis Zeigler, former postmaster and prominent politician of DuBois, Pa., was assaulted by an unknown fiend, and she lies at her home in a very critical condition.

At Sharon, Pa., the scale recently submitted for the present year by the National Steel company to its employees was signed. The men signed the scale at a reduction of 10 per cent over the wages paid last year.

The American Bridge company signed the scale presented by Pittsburgh Local No. 3 of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' union. Their wages have been advanced from 27 1/2 cents an hour for a 10-hour day to 33 1/3 cents an hour for a 9-hour day. This was agreed to at a conference in New York between President Percival Roberts, of the American Bridge company, and a committee of workmen, George Buchan, of Pittsburgh, has signed. It was believed other firms at Pittsburgh, one at Columbus and one at Beaver Falls would also sign. Good Intent and East Finley will be discontinued.

Denver, Jan. 4.—Stanley S. Stokes, one of the most widely known newspaper men in Colorado, died at his home in this city, aged 52 years. He was born at Cayuga, N. Y. He came to Colorado in 1872.

THE GRAND SCHEMER

HE UNFOLDS A PLAN WITH MILLIONS IN IT TO A CREDITOR.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

As the man turned into the doorway leading up to Major Crofoot's office he had a look of determination on his face. As he ascended the well worn stairs his tread showed aggressiveness. As he banged the major's door open and entered he had the air of a creditor who'd get his money or carry away his pound of flesh. The major was in. He sat at his desk smoking a very short stub of cigar, but as the door opened he whirled with a bland smile on his face, and, rising, with both hands held out, he exclaimed:

"Well, now, but this is truly a coincidence—a coincidence! Come right in, my dear fellow—come right in!"

in the middle of the room. "Now, then, no more skulking and dodging. You owe me $10 borrowed money, and I want it right off the reel."

"My dear Mr. Shine," said the major as he took a last puff at his stub, "you formerly had an office next door. We became acquainted. You learned that I was temporarily embarrassed, and, sizing me up as an honest, ambitious man, who would ultimately overcome his bad luck, you kindly forced a $10 bill upon me one day."

"I deny it!" shouted Mr. Shine. "Why, hang it, you were annoying me every day for a month before I let you have the money, and you told me a thousand lies to get it!"

"When you so kindly forced that money upon me," continued the major as he smiled and walked, "I said to myself that some day I would repay you a thousandfold. It was your trust, your confidence, in me that touched me. I was almost unknown to you. For all you knew I might be a dead-beat. You had only your judgment to go on, but your judgment was right. This very morning I should have telegraphed you to call in."

"Oh, you are going to pay, eh?"

"Major Crofoot always pays his debts, sir, and in some cases he returns $100 for $1. It will be so in this case. I could have paid you back long ago, but was waiting to make it a memorable occasion for you. The time has arrived. My dear fellow, let us shake hands."

"What for? You owe me $10. You say you are going to pay it. I don't see the object of shaking hands."

"Yes, you truly cast your bread upon the waters," said the major as he paced the width of the room and looked into vacancy, "and I am pleased that your returns will be so great. Do you know I love a man who trusts to my honor and integrity? Let a man show his confidence in me, and I would sell my shirt for him. Yes, you kindly forced $10 upon me, and"—

"And now you kindly force it back again," interrupted Mr. Shine. "It's no use dodging, old man. I'm here for my money and am going to have it."

"My own inventive idea, as I told you, and it will astonish the world. The baby carriage can be changed into a cradle, a hammock or a sled by moving a lever. Good for summer or winter, you see. Is provided with a stationary milk bottle, a whistle and a rattlebox. Has an ice chest and a soothing sirup department. As the wheels turn a mouth organ plays. Provided with a patent brake, rubber tires and a mothproof cover; also has revolving fans to keep the flies away. After the baby gets out of long dresses he can use the carriage as a tricycle. That's the invention, Mr. Shine. Organized on a capital of $750,000, and shares to be sold at par. There's more than millions in it."

"I don't care a rap if there is. What I want is my $10, and I'll give you just five minutes to shell out."

"I was going to offer you the secretaryship," softly observed the major, "but the salary will be only ten thousand a year. What I shall offer you and what I was going to telegraph you about as you came in was the purchasing agency. We shall want a man to buy the milk and soothing sirup and see that they are pure. The salary will be at least $15,000 per year, with perquisites thrown in. My dear man, you trusted me. This is your reward. Now, will you shake?"

"Not by a durned sight!" shouted Mr. Shine as he bobbed around. "None of this sort of rot will stand me off on my $10. Do you want me to take it out of your hide?"

"And you can buy stock at par, my dear fellow—stock that will be worth 150 inside of four weeks. I have arranged for that. That stock will pay you at least 100 per cent. Invest $10,000, and you have an income of $25,000 per year. That's what comes of trusting to the integrity of Major Crofoot. Is it enough? If not, just say so, and I'll add $5,000 from my salary as president."

Mr. Shine deliberately removed his coat and vest and hung them on a chair.

"Or if you want to borrow $10 for a day or two you can have it and welcome. I'll just step out and get it for you."

The major stepped, and Mr. Shine removed his collar, tie and cuffs. Then he spat on his hands and limbered up his arms and waited. He waited for half an hour—two hours. Then he got up and redressed himself and kicked over the chairs and desk and went out. The major had stood him off once more.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Many Things of Which Its Graduates Are Ignorant.

The failure of the Sunday school as a means of giving a systematic and thorough knowledge of the Bible is great. A teacher in a city high school asked an advanced class of 40 or 50 pupils, who had been drilled for years in the International Sunday School Lessons, how to proceed in order to reach Palestine, and not one could give the desired information. Then she asked the class in what part of the world Palestine is located, and no one knew.

That is a very good specimen of Sunday school teaching and can be paralleled anywhere by those who will take the trouble to ask a few questions. The ignorance of the Bible on the part of most persons of average intelligence is something amazing. The simplest questions will elicit no answer on the part of most such persons.

That educated persons know something about the Bible may be assumed, but not unless the training goes much beyond the standard of the common school. Again and again it has transpired that those who were generally well informed, who were fairly well educated and regarded as bright and clever, were almost totally ignorant of the Bible. Their Sunday school training had given them no knowledge of the book that was of any value, and, however much they might have read it since, it was to them a sealed volume. —Boston Transcript.

Russia in Europe has a forest area of about 500,000,000 acres. One-third of the country indeed is forest.

A Jockey's Sensation When Riding.

"If you ride with your head down—that is to say, bent slightly, so that the wind does not beat right on to your face—you can breathe easily, but if you hold your mouth wide open and let the air beat right in your face then you will have great difficulty in breathing, and if the race is a long one you will become exhausted by the end of the ride." So said a well known jockey when questioned on the subject of what his sensations were when riding in a race.

"A mile race on a good horse is run in about 1 minute and 40 seconds. A mile in 1 minute and 40 seconds is at the rate of 36 miles an hour, so, you see, a race horse travels at train speed."

"If you want to know how it feels to go through the air at race horse speed just hang your head out of a railway carriage window, turning your face toward the way the train is traveling. At the same time imagine that you are sitting in a saddle and have to hold on to your horse and guide him on to victory if possible, keeping him from being run down or interfered with."

"It is no easy task to ride a horse in a race. The jockey must have all his wits about him. He does not have much time to think how he feels. When riding in a neck and neck race down the home stretch. I forget everything except that I must strain every nerve to pass the other horses. No thought is then given to the plaudits from the grand stand."

The Gentle Reader.

What has become of the gentle reader? asks Samuel M. Crothers in The Atlantic. One does not like to think that he has passed away with the stagecoach and the weekly news letter and that henceforth we are to be confronted only with the stony glare of the intelligent reading public. Once upon a time—that is to say, a generation or two ago—he was very highly esteemed. To him books were dedicated with long rambling prefaces and with episodes which were their own excuse for being. In the very middle of the story the writer would stop with a word of apology or explanation addressed to the gentle reader or at the very least with a nod or a wink no matter if the fate of the hero be in suspense or the plot be inextricably involved.

"Hang the plot!" says the author. "I must have a chat with the gentle reader and find out what he thinks about it."

And so confidences were interchanged, and there was gossip about the universe and suggestions in regard to the queerness of human nature until at last the author would jump up with: "Enough of this, gentle reader; perhaps it's time to go back to the story."

Miss Kingsley and the Gorillas.

On the Gabon river Miss Mary Kingsley's guide one day called to her to creep quietly through the bushes and then she saw a family of five gorillas—an old male, three females and a young one. The guide sneezed, which alarmed the gorillas, and they fled with a bark and a howl, the old male swinging from bough to bough like an acrobat on a trapeze.

On another day Miss Kingsley and her two guides came suddenly upon a solitary male gorilla, who, as usual, had appropriated a forest glade as a park for his private enjoyment. Furious at the intrusion, the brute, instead of fleeing, came shambling toward them, growling fiercely. "Shoot him," whispered Miss Kingsley. "I dare not," said the guide, "until he comes quite close. I have only one gun. The other is out of order. If I miss, he will kill us."

The gorilla came nearer. Rearing himself on his hind legs he beat his breast and roared, just as Du Chailu described long ago. Then, running forward, he stopped and roared again and again ran forward until quite close. Then the guide fired and the gorilla dropped dead. —Chambers' Journal.

Interested.

Mrs. Newrich—I never can remember how many cards to leave when calling. Old Gentleman—The rules are very simple, madam. You hand one to the servant and then on departing leave as many on the plate as there are adult members of the family, adding two of your husband's cards and occasionally dumping in a few more for good measure. Do not be niggardly in dealing out cards, as that suggests vulgar poverty.

"No, madam. I am Mr. Bristol, the card manufacturer." —Exchange.

Which is not to be compared with any similar event in our history. A sale which is to begin a new era for the Erlanger store. Not an effort to get cost out of balance of stock, as is usual with us twice a year, but an actual slaughter, regardless of original cost, with an object in view which will be made more clear later. Slaughter is a word we rarely use, but no other will fill the bill in this instance. But why give excuses for giving two or three dollars worth of merchandise for a dollar? The truthful, the interesting story of the store is best understood by reading the following list, which is but one chapter of many equally sensational.
